Balm for Long's Spirit Hard Task; Queer Snakes Shivering New York 200 Languages in India

The late Huey Long's friends won in Louisiana, by a big vote, and Senator Long was praised in the Senate as a "friend of the masses."

This may be satisfying to Huey Long's spirit, but it will not make up for the fact that he is not here. Senator Long liked action, and 1936 would have been a truly active year for him. He missed the AAA rulings, the talk of Republican candidates, the Morgan interrogatory—lots of fun.

Strange news from foreign places: Siam, by government decree, "forbids flirtation between boys and girls." Schoolmates must not write love letters to each other. Siam has undertaken a considerable task.

Villages near Foochow in China report "peculiar snakes that always select women for their victims. More than ten women have succumbed to the bites of these snakes."

The first snake set the example; read Genesis.

New York shivers and complains, the thermometer at two below zero; one policeman, down in Wall Street for the convenience of citizens, wears his thermometer hanging from his badge. This amuses wide-open spaces in the he-man Northwest, Minnesota, for instance, with 56 degrees below zero at International Falls Bridge.

New York yesterday was 63 degrees colder than on the same day a year ago, which shows what can be done to the weather by sun spots or something.

Count Witte, representing the Czar, came here to adjust peace terms with Japan, said it was hard to govern Russia, "speaking more than forty languages."

The British ruling in distant places proved that mixed languages can be overcome, if you know how. All over the world the accession of King Edward has been proclaimed, and in India alone the proclamation had to be translated into two hundred different languages.

In one assembly at Singapore, where Britain is building fortifications that interest Japan, thirty-seven nationalities were assembled.

When you consider two hundred separate languages in India alone, you realize the good fortune of this country, with only one language from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and no custom house between states.

At a royal funeral it is important to have royalty, a commodity growing scarce in Europe. Walking behind King George's coffin, there will be at least six Kings, his son Edward VIII and the monarchs of Belgium, Norway, Denmark, Rumania and Bulgaria.

King George would not receive King Carol, objecting to his alleged morals. Carol will let bygones be bygones and join the funeral procession. How many Kings will be left for the next royal British funeral?

In formalities attending the new King's accession, there was one change; no public announcement of Edward's accession in the city of Dublin, although the Irish Free State is part of the British Commonwealth.

The King will be proclaimed at Belfast on Friday, probably nowhere else in Ireland.

De Valera sent condolences on the King's death, but stopped there. The latest royal baby was named Patrick, among other names, but the old animosity remains.

Married life in Germany will be complicated under proposed new rulings. The academy for German law says marriage is not a mere personal relationship; it is first of all, "the foundation and breeding-cell of the racial community." Therefore, no matter how much a husband and wife may love each other, or how complete their harmony, if the husband and wife haven't the right political views, namely Nazi views, they are leading "jointly a criminal or immoral life," and are to be divorced by law, regardless of their wishes.

When one man has power to tell millions of others what they must do queer things happen.

Fierce light beats upon a throne, and upon its occupant, even after he has left the throne. Every detail of the late King George's life is brought to light. The Archbishop of Canterbury, official head of the English church, saying "for nearly forty years King George permitted me to look upon him as a very dear friend," refers to the King's last moment, "in which I prayed for him and gave him my blessing and in which I commended his soul as it was passing to our loving and merciful God."

He reveals the fact that the King prayed every day of his life, read the Bible daily, never on Sunday failed to attend "the public worship of God."

CHAPTER TWO

A few years ago it was rather fashionable among those who considered themselves very up to date to poke a mild fun at Her Majesty, the present dowager Queen Mary. During the era of the great nonsense that followed in the wake of the war, a person quite so avowedly domestic seemed slightly out of place in a world in which even grandmothers smoked cigarettes.

I think that on the whole we have learned a little better since then.

That austere insistence upon "standards"; that old and openly avowed belief in the obligations inherent in one's privileges, seems to have had more to it than a great many persons had supposed during that dreadful decade, when "anything goes" had become the slogan of both rich and poor.

Hendrik W. Van Loon

And the Queen's rigorous insistence upon duty with a big capital letter D has begun to take a rather prominent place in the minds of all of us.

All the more so as Her Majesty has invariably practiced what she preached. She is a shy person, not fond of publicity and truth to tell, we know very little about her.

But when, a year after her en-

Multitude At Bier of King George

By DAVID F. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, Jan. 24—While six kings, princes and statesmen from the four corners of Europe began converging on London by boat, train and airplane today the first thousands of his mourning subjects began streaming past the bier of King George V.

Within the first two hours after five centuries-old Westminster Hall was thrown open to the public, 25,000, old and young, had shuffled sorrowfully through. By Tuesday, when the body will be taken to Windsor for burial, it is expected that one million will view the catafalque.

10,000 AN HOUR PASS

The mourners progressed through the great hall throughout the morning and early afternoon at the rate of 10,000 an hour. Outside there were two lines, each more than a mile long, martialled by hundreds of policemen.

Despite the comparatively swift rate at which the lines moved, it took each person more than an hour to pass from the end of one of the lines to the bier.

Approximately 60,000 of the late King's subjects had thus paid final respects by 2 p. m.

Late last night the long queue began forming, and all today it wound out St. Stephen's entrance to the Houses of Parliament and beyond the shadow of massive Victoria Tower.

At the head of the line was an ex-soldier, now unemployed, and next was a middle-aged woman, who said she had been at work at

RESIGNS U. S. JOB, OTHERS DUE TO GO

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Arthur G. Rotch is definitely through as WPA administrator.

This was revealed today by Governor Curley upon his return from Washington.

Ten minutes later Rotch ratified it by admitting to the Boston Evening American that

"My resignation has been in for several days."

"The story I get is that he was through two days ago."

SEES SHAKEUP NEAR

Continuing, the Governor stated:

"This news, I am quite certain, is very pleasing to every worker under the management of WPA Administrator Rotch, namely, that he is no longer in charge."

The Governor was of the opinion that removal of Rotch would be followed by a general shakeup in the Boston headquarters of the administrator's office.

Rotch today held his weekly conference with district administrators. After the meeting, he said there had been no mention of his resignation. He declared also that he had nothing to add to his confirmation that his resignation had been submitted.

The Governor professed to be

Colder weather was officially forecast for Boston tonight as the city proper escaped the sub-zero temperatures predicted for today.

Later, the Mojave wirelessed that the Nantucket was approaching her position, seeking her buoy, and that she would remain as close to the position as possible until the arrival of the relief vessel. The Mojave prepared to resume her off-shore patrol.

Seven degrees above zero, recorded at 6 and 7 o'clock this morning, was the city minimum for the last 24 hours.

Slowly rising temperatures tomorrow, accompanied by diminishing winds and followed by snow flurries at night, were predicted to end the cold wave.

DEATH TOLL NEAR 100

The Associated Press estimated the death toll at close to 100; International News Service estimated property damage in the millions. New snow storms were forecast in

SIX HOLDUP SUSPECTS GO FREE

Six men questioned in the investigation of the bold $18,000 payroll holdup at the United Drug Company offices in Roxbury, were released today after Paymaster Paul G. Weden of North Quincy, and his assistant, Frank D. Hyde of Brockton, had been unable to identify them.

All six had been taken into custody in a cleanup of the South End, where police are certain that the holdup, involving three bandits and a girl accomplice, was plotted.

One of the six was a South End

John D.'s Grandson Loses Auto License

The driving license of David Rockefeller, 20, grandson of John D. Rockefeller and a Harvard senior, was suspended for a week today by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin for allegedly speeding at 68 miles an hour.

The offense was said to have occurred on the Southwest cut-off, Auburn, on the evening of January 5. The car was reported to Registrar Goodwin by State Trooper James E. Cronin.

David Rockefeller lives at Eliot House, Cambridge.

20 in Street Car Shaken by Crash

A score of passengers in a street car on Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, were slightly shaken up today when the car was in collision with a backing coal truck.

The truck, police reported, was operated by Harry Sheehan of Washington street, Dorchester. The right front end of the street car was slightly damaged.

MARJORIE RICHARDS

Searchers for Marjorie Richards, missing 13-year-old daughter of District Attorney Keri E. Richards of Harrisburg, Pa., turned again to New York city today.

The hunt shifted to the metropolis after relatives in Swampscott reported the girl had not appeared at their home and a truck driver reported giving a ride to a girl of her description.

HOUSE VOTES BONUS 324-61 OVER VETO

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP) — A heavily Democratic House voted 324 to 61 to override President Roosevelt's veto of the $2,491,000,000 bonus bill. Only a two-thirds majority was needed.

From the cheering representatives, who refused to delay the ballot even a day, the bill goes to the Senate where a vote is not possible until Monday.

There, too, leaders forecast the $2,491,000,000 bill will be made law over President Roosevelt's opposition.

Senator Clark (D.), Missouri, an author of the measure, predicted not more than 20 votes would be cast to sustain the veto as against the 33 needed.

PENNED HIS "NO"

It was the second time in a year the House has tossed aside a presidential bonus veto. The vote to sustain the veto today was only two greater than that cast against the bill's original passage.

CONFIDENCE AND CREDIT

"The first great want of the country, that without answering which all attempts at bettering the present condition of things will prove fruitless, is a complete restoration of the credit and finances of the federal government. The source and foundation of all credit is in the confidence which the government inspires."

—PRESIDENT JOHN TYLER, to the Senate and House of Representatives, March 25, 1842.

SENATE TO ACT ON PRESIDENT 'NO' MONDAY

mands of "Vote, Vote," were shouted on the floor.

Democratic leaders ought to delay the ballot until Monday, but were voted down, 39 to 131.

Mr. Roosevelt's handwritten message, returning the bonus bill "without my approval," broke precedent of a quarter of a century.

Senator Harrison (D.), Mississippi, chairman of the finance committee and an administration stalwart, said:

"It is my opinion that the veto will not be sustained. I shall vote to override the veto."

VIEWS UNCHANGED

Mr. Roosevelt, in his message, referred senators and representatives "respectively . . . to every word of what I said" in last year's veto of a currency-expansion bonus payment bill.

"My convictions are as impelling today as they were then," the President said. "Therefore I cannot change them."

The text of the passage follows:

"I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. bill 9870, entitled 'An act to provide for the immediate payment of World War adjusted service certificates, for the cancellation of unpaid interest accrued on loans secured by such certificates, and for other purposes.'

"On May 22, 1935, in disapproving a bill to pay the bonus in full immediately instead of in 1945, I gave in person to a joint session of the Congress complete and explicit reasons for my action.

"The bill I now return differs from last year's bill in only two important respects: First, it eliminates the issuance of unsecured paper currency to make the payments required and substitutes interest-bearing bonds, which, however, may be converted into cash for face value at any time; second, it adds $263,000,000 to the total payments by forgiving interest after October 1, 1931, on amounts borrowed.

"In all other respects, the circumstances, arguments and facts remain essentially the same as those fully covered and explained by me only eight months ago.

"I respectfully refer the members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives to every word of what I said then.

"My convictions are as impelling today as they were then. Therefore, I cannot change them."

"CREDIT STILL SAFE"

One pertinent phrase from last year's veto message which Mr. Roosevelt evidently had in mind today was:

"The credit of the United States is safe, but it cannot ultimately be safe if we engage in a policy of yielding to each and all of the groups that are able to enforce upon the Congress claims for special consideration."

White House aides said Mr. Roosevelt broke precedent of a quarter of a century when he sent his message to Capitol hill in his own handwriting.

Up to the time of the administration of Theodore Roosevelt all messages to Congress were written in long hand. But none has gone to the Capitol in long hand since then.

While the veto did not come as a surprise, the manner of its sudden transmission to Congress today upset some calculations.

The Menace of Farley

IF any further doubt existed in the minds of thinking Americans that James A. Farley is building up the greatest and most dangerous political machine in the history of the country, they may become thoroughly disabused by reading the indictment, based on STARK FIGURES AND INCONTROVERTIBLE FACTS, of Lawrence Sullivan, Washington political correspondent, in the "Atlantic Monthly."

"Postmaster-General Farley," says Mr. Sullivan, "estimates that every job handed out to a political appointee is worth, on an average, FORTY VOTES. According to the Farley tables of American morality THERE ALREADY ARE CORRALLED SOME 11,800,000 VOTES FOR MR. FARLEY'S PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE IN 1936.

"In a prospective Presidential vote of 40,000,000, the 11,800,000 votes already lined up, according to Mr. Farley's system, is equal to the combined 1932 Presidential vote of both major parties in the six New England states and in Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Washington, Oregon and California."

THE combined activities and dreams of Quay, Platt, Tweed and Croker never contemplated any such debauchery of a people as the lashing of NEARLY ONE-THIRD OF THE AMERICAN ELECTORATE TO THE WHEELS OF THE NEW AMERICAN CAESARISM.

Part of this conspiracy to keep Farley's chief in office by methods that only a man schooled in the vast colonization methods of Tammany Hall could think of is the attack of this administration on the civil service system, which has stood the test of fifty years.

"The present administration has added roundly 235,000 persons to the direct full-time pay-roll of the federal government, BUT ONLY ONE IN 107 AMONG THE NEW PERSONNEL IS UNDER CIVIL SERVICE.

"The total of jobs available to Mr. Farley's appointive system to date has been 295,000, representing an average of 8939 appointments every month. But in the face of this tremendous expansion and turnover the total classified positions subject to civil service regulations DECLINED from 467,161 on March 3, 1933, to 455,264 on June 30, 1935."

The steady pounding of the Farley appointees against the civil service appointees has resulted in A CONTINUOUS DECLINE IN THE MORALE of legitimate office-holders.

THE building up of this Farleyized army of millions and the disintegration of the merit system in our civil service are properly in keeping with the program of an administration which FLOUTS THE CONSTITUTION, LAYS TAXES FOR SPITE PURPOSES and allows itself to be sold down the river to such alien-minded advisers as Felix Frankfurter, Quack Doctor Tugwell and the impractical visionary, Henry A. Wallace.

It is time decent Americans roused themselves TO THE MENACE OF FARLEYISM.

in the dark as to who will be named to succeed Administrator Rotch.

SURE OF COURT CASH

"I am positive we will get the funds for the Suffolk County courthouse addition," he said. "The only thing that stands in the way now is the locating of the money.

"The sum of $100,000,000 has been earmarked by the government to the State of Wisconsin, in anticipation that the state would appropriate a like amount on recommendation of Senator LaFollette. The Legislature has refused to make a matching appropriation and there is little likelihood that the Legislature will change its mind.

"That money can and should be reallotted for projects in other states."

The governor asserted that it is "definitely settled" that Massachusetts is to receive $700,000 for the National Guard camp at Fort Devens.

Then touching on the project to deepen the main Boston Harbor channel, the governor said:

"The sum of $1,900,000 for the harbor project has been finally allocated and I understand that the contracts are being advertised."

OTHER BIG PROJECTS

The governor said he had arranged with Senator Walsh to take up additional matters on which it is hoped to get favorable action. He mentioned among these, the sum of $800,000 for projects at Fort Devens, and further funds to make a start toward developing and beautifying the Merrimack, Blackstone and Connecticut rivers valleys, and the enlargement of the East Boston airport through the connecting of Governor's Island with the mainland.

"We are hopeful that the Massachusetts congressional delegation, headed by Senator Walsh, will get the necessary approval for the allocation of funds to bring about the approval of these projects," he said.

QUINCY PAY OVERDUE

Meanwhile, Mayor Thomas S. Burgin of Quincy visited the WPA offices in Boston in an effort to learn why Quincy WPA workers have not received their pay, now more than a week overdue.

Mayor Burgin declared that 500 Quincy workers expected to get their money yesterday but that they were disappointed and were forced again to appeal for welfare aid.

The Quincy mayor also said he had sent a telegram to Congressman Wigglesworth asking that something be done to obtain a weekly payroll for WPA workers.

New Solution Makes Dentistry Painless

By BETTY DI PESA

It's true, folks. You don't have to fear the dentist's drill any more.

That instrument of torture still must be used in filling a tooth, but thanks to Dr. Hartman of Columbia University and his scientific knowledge, a de-sensitizer has been developed which makes drilling a mere painless incidental to the process of having a tooth filled.

I know because I had a huge cavernous hole in my tooth filled yesterday by Dr. Leon Balicer of 144 Dudley street, Roxbury. He used this new solution.

I sat in the dentist's chair with the usual fear and trembling. The doctor took out a harmless looking bottle containing a water-like liquid.

The application was made with a pellet of cotton.

I expected to experience a feeling of numbness, but I was wrong. I felt no apparent reaction. I just had a sweetish taste in my mouth and smelled something that resembled ether.

The application was made within the tooth and not around it or on the gum. The dentist explained the solution would burn the gum.

And then came the climax—the drill.

There was no feeling at all. The friction was all gone. No buzz-zz-zz. No gr-rr-rinding.

And the whole process was accomplished in a much quicker time.

Dr. Balicer explained this was because he didn't have to fear hurting the patient.

And at the same time he explained this new solution will reduce the price of filling teeth because it will take less time. The solution is comparatively inexpensive.

POISON KILLING CASE TO JURY BY NIGHT

Mineola, N. Y., Jan. 24 (INS)—Closing arguments began behind closed doors today in the trial of Mrs. Mary Frances Creighton and Everett Applegate, both charged with the poison-murder of Applegate's wife so that the latter, the state contends might wed his co-defendant's 14-year-old daughter, Ruth.

With both state and defense cases rested court ordered that during summations by opposing counsel no one leave the Nassau County courtroom where Mrs. Creighton and Applegate are on trial.

High-spots of the trial were the crumbling of Mrs. Creighton's composure under cross-examination, her admission that she knew the arsenic content of a lethal draught given Applegate's 260-pound wife shortly before she died, her faltering story of intimate relations with Applegate and the latter's sordid exposition of Little Ruth's story of her intimacies with Applegate while his wife lay ill.

Completion of the situations and the Court's charge alone remained before fate of both defendants was to reach the jury, probably before nightfall.

In his closing argument, just before the noon recess, counsel for the state pointed out:

"Mrs. Creighton admits she had intimate relations with Applegate and so does Ruth. They want you to believe that Applegate was afraid that his wife would talk, but they admit themselves that Mrs. Applegate was in bed at least once when Applegate had improper relations with Ruth."

Van Devanter Recovering

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—Justice Van Devanter of the Supreme Court, ill several days with a cold in his throat, was reported today to be recovering rapidly and would be permitted tomorrow to leave his bed.

READ REPUCCI'S 'CONFESSION' IN COURT

The alleged "confession" of Antonio Repucci, who, with Edward Guarnelli, is being tried in Suffolk Superior Criminal court charged with the murder by shooting of Walter R. Doucette, State Prison guard, who was killed while taking them back to prison in a taxi, was read to the jury today by William J. Shanahan, police stenographer.

The alleged "confession" was made at Hanover street police station January 2 following Repucci's arrest in Providence, R. I., several days after the shooting.

According to the document, Repucci and Guarnelli agreed that one of them should take Doucette's gun away from him while enroute from South Station to State Prison, Charlestown, and the other should seize the key to the handcuffs.

Repucci was quoted in the statement that he hit Doucette on the head five or six times after which Doucette fired one shot in the air. The statement said all three were out of the cab in Commercial street when he got the gun from the guard and gave it to Guarnelli.

Doucette then rushed at him, the statement added, whereupon Guarnelli fired the shot which felled Doucette, saying as he did so:

"Stop, or I'll give it to you."

Roosevelt Threat Writer in Asylum

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Austin Phelps Palmer, Park avenue retired engineer who wrote threatening letters to President Roosevelt, was sent to Bellevue Hospital for observation today on motion of J. NO NEW COURT, MAYOR THINKS

Mayor Mansfield today scored as "mere conjectures" the reassurances of Governor Curley that $1,800,000 federal funds would soon be available for the proposed Suffolk County courthouse addition.

The governor on his return from Washington today had announced that $100,000,000 earmarked by the government for Wisconsin would be available for other states since there was "little likilihood" that Wisconsin would match the sum to obtain the appropriation.

Declaring the deadline for such transfers was already passed, Mayor Mansfield said:

"All friends of the new courthouse project will be disappointed in Governor Curley's latest assurances from Washington.

"Apparently, the money, which he assured us was to be allotted by Presidential order, has disappeared and now all we have is another conjecture that as soon as money is available it will be allotted.

"Friends of this much needed project ought not to be lulled into a sense of false security by these assurances.

"Up to the present moment the facts are that there is no money whatsoever available for this project and there will be none unless the present Congress passes new legislation.

"I was informed by Colonel Bowman (a Washington PWA official) when I was in Washington that the deadline in the surrendering of allocations, which thus might be released for projects in other states, was January 15.

While the worst of the icy blasts sidestepped Boston, suffering among the poor was marked here as elsewhere.

The most dramatic episode in the local situation was the battle waged by the lighthouse and coast guard services to place a guardian vessel at the edge of Nantucket shoals from which position the regular lightship was swept yesterday when she snapped her chain cable in the gale.

LIGHTSHIP SAFE

The lightship, Captain David R. Studley, radioed at 8 a. m. she was hove to 36 miles west of her regular position, unable at the time because of the gale, to return. He reported the vessel heavily iced, awash in rough seas but in no danger.

Coast Guard cutter Mojave, Commander C. H. Abel, master, with a crew of 100 men, radioed that she had not yet been able to reach the lightship's normal position to which she was assigned as a temporary guardian. She also reported being heavily iced and that ice-load during the night felled her wireless antenna.

Lightship 83, dispatched early today to "cover in" for the Nantucket vessel, will require 17 hours at least to reach the position.

The first Greater Boston fatality of the cold wave was recorded in Everett today when William Livingston, 70, was found dead in his unheated home at 5 Alfred court.

Death was pronounced due to natural causes induced by the extreme cold by Medical Examiner John Paul Reardon.

With new snow over New Hampshire and Vermont and blown drifts of Sunday's storm blocking the roads of western Massachusetts, driving conditions over a wide area were perilous.

New Hampshire's Mt. Washington was the nation's coldest and most precarious spot today. The temperature was 36 below zero, the wind was a westerly hurricane officially recorded at 133 miles per hour.

As the weathermen dug into the records, 90 below in northern Siberia years ago appeared to be the "world's official." The North American record stands at 76 below, credited to an Alaskan town.

Shipping continued to bear the brunt of the weather hereabouts. Two steam trawlers and two schooners were the only Fish Pier arrivals.

A weather freak occurred with the arrival here of the Greek freighter Couloudris Xenos, which anchored in Nantasket Roads. When her captain tried to get her anchor up again, he found the windlass frozen. He poured gasoline over the windlass and set the gas afire to thaw out.

The coast guard received scores of calls regarding a "ship afire" and the freighter Norfolk even radioed about it. A patrol boat sped to the scene and was assured all was well. The Greek ship melted the ice, got her anchor up and moved inside.

Here's why fish prices, even here in seaside Boston, are going up, these days of near-zero temperatures. Bringing home cod and haddock for your Friday dinner is a tough job even for such hardy salts as Al Nickerson of the schooner Lark. The vessel is tied up at the Boston Fish pier after heating to port through gales which left her deck and dories thick with ice, as you see them.

If Jack Frost Bites Do This:

During the present severe weather there is grave danger of painful frostbite, Dr. William B. Keller, Boston's new health commissioner, said today in prescribing emergency treatment for sufferers.

"Exposure should be avoided as far as possible. If persons compelled to remain in the open feel a numbness in exposed parts of the body they should immediately examine the affected part.

"If any member is found to be of unnatural whiteness, circulation may be restored at once by application of snow or cold water compresses with a little friction.

"To avoid serious after-effects, those afflicted should see their family physicians as soon as possible after emergency treatment."

Ice Jam Starts Niagara Rise

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Jan. 24 (AP)—One of the worst ice jams since 1909 had formed in the lower Niagara river, below Niagara Falls, today, as a result of the extreme cold and storm of the past two days.

The jam extends from the Queenston, Ont., plant of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, six miles, to the United States Coast Guard station at Youngstown, N. Y.

Officials at the plant said the river had risen 15 feet above normal, but that there was no immediate danger.

Vidal Calls For Junior Air Corps

Washington, Jan. 24 (U.S.)—Praising the Junior Birdmen of America, an organization of air-minded youth sponsored by the Hearst newspapers, Eugene Vidal, director of the commerce department's bureau of air commerce, told the House military affairs committee the Civilian Conservation Corps should be used as a nucleus for establishment of a Junior Air Reserve Corps.

Vidal testified at hearings on a bill introduced by Representative McSwain (D) of South Carolina, chairman of the committee, to authorize the secretary of war to organize the junior reserve.

Vidal said he had discussed the advisability of using CCC personnel and the 1500 camps "with interested parties." He added:

"The bureau of aeronautics feels your bill is a step in the right direction. This is a good time to concentrate on the development of numbers of pilots and planes. The quality will come along with that."

Two college youths testified at the hearing today that Communistic elements have spread subversive propaganda in schools and universities throughout the country.

They are M. D. Strohmeier, Amherst College, and J. B. Hartranjant of the University of Pennsylvania. They said officials are attempting to destroy the reserve officers training corps in colleges through issuance of literature and talks on the college campuses.

Sterile Girl Wins Court's High Praise

San Francisco, Jan. 24 (AP) — A judge who complimented Ann Cooper Hewitt on her bearing as a witness pondered today whether to issue criminal complaints against her mother and two doctors, accused by the 21-year-old heiress of duping her into a sterilization operation.

She testified she had thought it was an appendectomy.

Asked if she would have consented to be sterilized had she been consulted, she retorted:

"Most certainly not!"

The girl, rated at 11 years mentally by a psychiatrist, testified for almost an hour concerning the operation in 1934, the basis of her $500,000 damage suit against her mother, Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter; the psychiatrist, Mrs. Mary Scally; the diagnostician, Dr. Tilton E. Tillman, and the surgeon, Dr. Samuel G. Boyd.

At the close of the hearing Municipal Judge Sylvain J. Lazarus told Miss Hewitt:

"You are a wonderful witness. It isn't often we have people here who testify as clearly and intelligently as you have."

He said he would announce his decision next Tuesday.

Miss Hewitt, a tiny figure in the witness chair, told of suffering severe abdominal pains and of being examined by Dr. Tillman, "who looked at me and said he guessed I should have my appendix removed," and by Mrs. Scally, who asked "asinine questions."

She said Mrs. Scally represented herself as a nurse and did not tell her she was giving her a mental test.

WOMAN Guilty in HIT-RUN

MRS. GORMAN IN SALEM COURT

Ending one of the most unusual legal tangles experienced in Essex County, Mrs. Caroline P. Gorman, 27, of Appleton street, Salem, was given a two months' suspended sentence today in Peabody court as an alleged hit-and-run driver.

Her arraignment today was the first identification of Mrs. Gorman, wife of James H. Gorman, former Salem high school football star, as the young matron for whom police had been searching since March 24.

Only a few days ago, Attorney Joseph B. Harrington of Salem had been adjudged in contempt of court in Superior Court at Salem for refusing to disclose the name of his woman client in whose behalf he allegedly had attempted to settle out of court with two youths injured by the woman's car.

The contempt charge was expunged when Attorney Harrington finally told the court in private the name of his client.

Today the young matron surrendered to Peabody police and was immediately arraigned before Judge Daniel C. Manning.

She pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident on the night of March 24 after her automobile had caused critical injuries to two Peabody youths walking in Tremont street, Peabody.

The youths were John Jacovanco, 17, and Frank Gerfikowski, 18, both students at Peabody High school. They were under treatment at J. B. Thomas Hospital, Peabody, for weeks.

State Senator William H. McSweeney, her present counsel, told the court Mrs. Gorman believed she had run over a log of wood but that when she read in the paper next day that two boys had been injured, she consulted an attorney.

Police Chief Edward P. Pierce recommended to the court that the minimum sentence be imposed, and Judge Manning gave her the suspended sentence of two months in jail and placed her on probation until July 24.

After the court hearing, Mrs. Gorman, mother of a three-and-a-half-year-old daughter, told the Boston Evening American:

"I followed the advice of my attorney this morning and appeared in court. I wanted to get it cleared up. I expect that I will lose my license and registration for some time. That's all I have to say about it."

Wellesley Girl, B. U. Youth Elope

MRS. ALBERT HANEY

Miss Irene Budlong, daughter of a wealthy Chicago banker, who eloped to New York with Albert Haney, Boston University football player, was on the high seas today with her new husband, bound for Puerto Rico.

The bride, a student at Wellesley, left the college on January 15, after turning a note to Miss Helen W. Lyman, house mother of Cazenove Hall, over to her roommate, Miss Evelyn Robinson.

The couple met last year while both were attending Northwestern University. When Haney transferred to B. U., Miss Budlong came to Wellesley.

Plan Roosevelt Acceptance Fete

Philadelphia, Jan. 24 (AP)—Albert M. Greenfield, chairman of a local committee on arrangements for the Democratic national convention in June, announced that President Roosevelt, if renominated, will accept the nomination in person as he did at Chicago in 1932.

Greenfield said last night the acceptance ceremony will be held in Franklin Field, University of Pennsylvania stadium, which is within two blocks of convention hall, probably on June 27. The convention begins on June 23.

In Washington, no announcement was made at the White House, but party leaders said they were confident the President would accept in person.

NUDES In Primary SCHOOLS

URGED BY ART SPEAKER HERE

Nude figures should be employed even in art classes of the primary grades, Otto F. Ege of Cleveland declared today at a meeting of the School of Art, Brookline Ave., Back Bay.

"If a child is allowed to observe nudity at an early age, he does not giggle when he approaches a nude statue or painting in a museum later in life," Ege said.

Mr. Ege was one of the speakers at the 13th annual conference of supervisors and teachers of art.

"In England pupils in the third grade are allowed to draw from the nude and it is done very successfully," he stated.

Mr. Ege explained that in the Cleveland public schools the nearnude was used in "life classes."

Sex Dominant

Concerning the use of the nude in the higher grades, Mr. Ege told the assemblage:

"The fundamental interest of the adolescent is the nude whether we like it or not.

"What the adolescent wants to do, think and feel is too inconsistent with what the conventional adult thinks he ought to do, think, and feel.

"Our established institutions are still antagonistic to the child's basic impulse and interest.

"The child thinks and feels sex. It is a dominant thing in high school. And the art teacher can manipulate it to advantage."

Excursion Boat Sinks at R. I. Dock

Providence, R. I., Jan. 24 (AP)—The steamer Mt. Hope, for nearly half a century engaged in the excursion business in Narragansett Bay, sank last night at its dock in the ice covered Providence River.

Officials of the Providence, Newport and Fall River Steamboat company, her owners, said they believed snow dumped into the river from a nearby bridge pulled the oakum from her seams as the tide carried it down the river. The Mt. Hope was built in Chelsea, Mass., in 1888.

SIX SUSPECTS IN HOLDUP ARE FREED

man with a long police record, whose car was reported stolen January 6 and was found abandoned yesterday in Brighton after the holdup.

The six men were picked up by the newly organized special service squad on an inside clue from a girl.

On this squad are Sergeant Leo Hoban and Detectives Abraham Morse, Daniel Donahue and Vernon White.

That the three gunmen who staged the holdup are part of an organized gang was apparent in the speed and dispatch with which the robbery was carried out.

The girl, who police suspect may have been a discharged employe at the plant, served as a lookout for the trio, and probably furnished them with the layout of the paymaster's office.

The gunmen had to retreat down four flights of stairs after grabbing the money bags, and police were convinced that to take this daring chance, they must have been supplied with a detailed plan of the interior of the building.

In addition to the tip that sent the police into the South End, they are also checking on two machines, one of which was abandoned after the quartet had made their escape.

One, owned by Mrs. Edith Younan of West Walnut park, Roxbury, was reported stolen December 27. The other used to block police in the pursuit, was registered under a forged name.

Meanwhile, two girls who were shot in the building when a patrolman slipped and fell, accidentally discharging a shotgun, were recovering from their wounds today.

Miss Alice Cassidy of Knowles street, Roslindale, employed at the plant, is at her home with slight wounds in the foot. An operation was performed on the other victim, Miss Dorothy Middleton of Seymour street, Roslindale, another employe, to remove the buckshot. She is at the Brooks Hospital in Pond street, Roxbury.

Satisfied that the shooting was an accident, police planned no action against the officer who was carrying the gun at the time.

The holdup was staged shortly after Paymaster Weden and his assistant, Hyde, had just reported for work and accepted the delivery of the $18,000 from the crew of an armored truck service.

Before they had a chance to start making up the payroll, the three men entered the paymaster's office, covered the employes with revolvers and snatched up the bags of money.

Neighbors later told police that they saw the girl hop into the automobile of the fleeing trio which roared away from the scene.

"Know" Lost Boy Will Come Home

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Firm in their belief that lost Dale Tibbetts of Medfield is still alive and will come home to them, the missing boy's mother, Mrs. Ada Tibbetts, and his dog pal, Mitzi, are waiting day and night for the happy reunion which they both are sure will take place soon. Mrs. Tibbetts keeps a hot meal ready on the stove, lest little Dale be chilled and hungry when he returns.

Medfield, Jan. 24—G-men, State police and local authorities were today attempting to locate a man and woman whose footprints were found on a little used path the day before Dale Tibbetts, 3, disappeared.

Mrs. Ida Tibbetts, mother of the boy who vanished on January 15, remembered seeing the footprints and reported the fact to the police.

Investigators, engaged in running down the slightest clue, were still equally divided as to theories. The kidnaping theory was being followed by G-men, while other probers were convinced that the boy wandered into the swamp and was drowned, or died from exposure.

LINDY MYSTERY UNSOLVED

Footprints Not Cleared at Trial

Why, a little less than a year ago, was Bruno Richard Hauptmann adjudged guilty by a jury of the murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.? Was Governor Hoffman justified in granting him a reprieve?

Much testimony at the Flemington trial is dimly remembered. To show how this testimony convicted Hauptmann, the Boston Evening American has been publishing it, with only the non-essentials eliminated, as it appears in the official trial record. In addition, more recent circumstances dealing with the testimony are placed in their proper sequence. This is the seventh installment.

New York, Jan. 24—Importance of footprints found under the window of the Lindbergh nursery the night of the kidnaping was stressed at the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, in questioning by both prosecution and defense attorneys.

More about the footprints came from State Trooper Lewis J. Bornmann, under questioning by Prosecutor Wilentz:

Q—You saw the ladder?

A—Yes, I picked it up; in three sections. Two sections were lying together, and one section about 10 feet further on.

He carried the ladder into the house. At this point there was a long argument over admitting the ladder as evidence, the defense claiming that it was not in the same condition as it was on the night of the kidnaping. It was marked for identification only.

Over repeated objections from the state, Defense Attorney Reilly again brought in the name of Ollie Whateley, the butler—and in connection with the footprints.

Q—What size shoe did the butler wear?

A—I never questioned him as to that.

Q—And you were there to put everybody under investigation except the Colonel and his wife, weren't you?

A—To a certain extent, yes.

A—I did.

Q—And you knew it wasn't the Colonel's footprint, didn't you?

A—And I knew it wasn't the butler's footprint.

Q—Did you take him out and measure it?

A—I questioned him.

Q—Never mind about questioning him. Did you take his shoe off and try to fit it in there? Did you?

A—No, I did not.

Q—Because you asked a man what size shoe he wore you came to the conclusion that it was not his footprint, is that it?

A—I knew he hadn't been out there.

Q—How did you know he wasn't out there?

A—I had his word for it.

Q—Did you measure this footprint? (The one near the ladder holes.)

A—Yes, sir.

Q—What did it measure?

A—It measured 13¼ inches approximately, between 13 and 13½ inches.

Q—You mean in length?

A—In length, and approximately 4 to 4½ inches in width.

The witness said he noticed "ridges" in the print.

ONLY ONE PRINT

But why only one footprint near the ladder?

Reilly stressed that point in his cross-examination:

Q—Now you want us to believe that some man came along in muddy ground within an area of two feet and within the indication as you have given us of this boardwalk and ladder and only made one footprint?

A—That is all I saw.

Q—And you couldn't find where he put the other foot at all?

A—No, sir, I could not.

Q—Did you see the ladder that night?

A—Yes, sir.

A—No, sir.

Q—Why didn't you?

A—I didn't want to get near the vicinity of the ladder. I examined the ladder from a distance.

Q—You didn't see any mud on the ladder at all, did you?

A—No, sir.

Q—You have given between 12 and 12¾—is that correct?

A—Between 12 and 12½.

Q—And you can come that accurately with a flashlight?

A—Yes, sir, I think so.

Q—Well, what prevented you from going into the house and saying to Mrs. Whateley or Miss Gow: "Give me a measuring tape?"

A—I guess I didn't think of it.

Q—And you don't know whose footprint it is, do you?

A—No sir, I don't.

Nor does any one else, except the kidnaper—if the print was made by the kidnaper. The state has always maintained that the kidnaper wore heavy socks over his shoes, hence it would have been difficult to link the footprint with any one person.

The state's viewpoint was expressed in Wilentz's summation. Admitting, for the sake of argument, that all was not done with those prints that might have been done, he said:

"The point I want to make is that, if anybody bungled anything, if they did, that doesn't relieve this defendant, who is guilty of murder."

In connection with footprints, although it came later in the trial, it may be pointed out that the much talked of footprint in the Bronx cemetery was not used by the state. The reason was that other persons had walked over the same ground, and the state felt that a cast of a print from the cemetery would not be admissible.

Those footprints are today what they were in 1932—a mystery.

HOFFMAN SEEKS "LIE TESTS" ON BRUNO

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 24 (INS)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann today reiterated his willingness to undergo a scientific "lie test," following Governor Hoffman's assertion that he would like to see such a test made.

When and if the condemned slayer of Baby Lindbergh is questioned with the "lie detector" fastened to his person it will be under the zealous scrutiny of defense attorneys, however, it was learned.

Furthermore, defense attorneys will not permit any such test to be made without a clear understanding in advance that they will be permitted to "censor" the questions and answers before they can be made public.

The governor conferred yesterday with Dr. William Moulton Marston, New York psychiatrist, who has experimented for years with the type of "lie detectors" which gauges truth by variations of the subject's blood pressure.

At the conclusion of the conference, the governor told reporters:

"I would like to have the blood pressure test made in the hope that we may clear up the doubts of many people in this case. But I do not know how the test legally could be made without the order of Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, the trial judge."

The "lie detector" is not recognized in New Jersey courts. It could prove nothing, officially, in this case.

It is understood that stern old Justice Trenchard would frown on any request to take the apparatus into the death house.

This would leave only two possible ways open for use of the device. Marston, a lawyer, could be admitted as a member of defense counsel and thus have access to Hauptmann. Or he could be appointed a member of the prison medical staff temporarily.

6 MEN RESCUED IN BOAT BLAST

Six men narrowly escaped serious injury today when an explosion occurred aboard a power boat at the Atlantic Works plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, East Boston.

The men were assisted to safety by members of the Coast Guard cutter Harriet Lane. The cutter, undergoing repairs, was tied up near the launch.

According to officials of the Bethlehem company the men were preparing to leave the pier and move into the stream where they were to complete repairs on a vessel.

As the boat was about to leave the pier the explosion occurred. The ensuing blaze was brought under control with small damage.

Realizing the possible dangers the coast guard cutter members threw rope ladders over the side and assisted the workmen aboard.

Flames Menace Big Powder Plant

Carney's Point, N. J., Jan. 24 (INS) — Fearing flames might spread to a powder plant two blocks away, local officials this noon summoned emergency fire fighting forces to combat a blaze that threatened the $100,000 clubhouse of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company here.

MAKES 'RAYON WOOL'

Georgia Tech Uses All Waste

Atlanta, Jan. 24 (AP)—Development of a process for manufacturing from rayon waste a new product closely resembling woolens was announced today by the Georgia School of Technology.

Professor W. Harry Vaughan, director of the institution's engineering experiment station, in describing the research carried on under the direction of Professor C. A. Jones, said socks and dress goods of the new yarn, possessing none of the silk-like appearance of rayon, already have been made and successfully dyed. Suitings and other woven and knitted materials were declared to be practical.

"It is the first time, so far as we know, that 100 per cent rayon waste has been utilized by cotton mill methods to form a marketable article," Professor Jones said.

He estimated approximately 10 per cent of the raw material going into rayon plants becomes waste.

A product similar to the new wool-like substance is being made in some plants out of finished rayon produced especially for the purpose, Professor Jones said. The cost of finished rayon is two or three times that of waste.

Professor Jones said the new waste-yarns can be manufactured at a fraction of the cost of wool. They have a hairy, woolly feel, but are slightly below wool in insulating properties, due to less air space between the fibres.

"Chemically the yarns differ from both wool and cotton," he said. "They open up wide possibilities in new dying effects, such as checks and stripes."

Explaining the experiments, he said:

"Rayon waste was shredded, chemically treated, lapped and carded before being formed into a slender roll of fibre.

"After that the process was the same as that used in the cotton mills."

SARRAUT FORMS NEW CABINET

Paris, Jan. 24 (AP)—Senator Albert Sarraut, who was premier for a month in 1933, was successful today in forming a new cabinet for France—the 101st of the third Republic.

Sarraut is a veteran of the Radical-Socialist party.

His cabinet is a transition body to keep the government running until the parliamentary elections in April or May, and succeeds the ministry of Pierre Laval.

In the list of nominees he submitted to President Lebrun, it was indicated that Sarraut intended to take over the ministry of the interior himself, together with the premiership.

FLAMES SWEEP LYNN HOME; 9 SAVED

With the mercury near the zero mark, nine persons were assisted or carried to safety today when flames swept the home of John J. Cullivan, 54, of Shepard street, Lynn.

Only a few hours earlier two other families were left homeless when fire destroyed their residence in Bedford street, the same city.

The Shepard street fire was discovered by Patrolman John Loughlin, who saw smoke pouring from the cellar. He sounded an alarm and then rushed to the home to arouse the occupants.

Cullivan's daughter, Louise, 17, was carried to the street, and another daughter, Florence, 24, was assisted down the stairs.

Her brother, John, 18, who already has several drowning rescues to his credit, added to his laurels today when he assisted a brother, Philip, 29, to the street, after the latter had been overcome by smoke.

Others driven out were Cullivan's wife, Mrs. Florence, 50, and the couple's other children, James, 15; Clarence, 13, and Edmund 9.

In the Bedford street fire, two Katsaulis families living in the two-family house, returned from a visit to find themselves homeless,

19 PERSONS DIE IN FLAMING HOMES

St. Johns, N. F., Jan. 24 (AP)—A mother, three children and a maid died today as fire swept their home.

The dead are Mrs. Anthony Noah, and her three children, David, six; Robert, four, and Angela, three, and Fifield Sheppard, the maid.

Only the husband and father, Anthony Noah, escaped.

A 10-year-old boy, the only survivor, escaped with severe burns and bruises by leaping from a second floor window after his heroic attempts to rouse the family had failed.

The dead are: Arthur Swope, 40-year-old widower; his daughters, Vaugnetta, 23, and Mary, 13, and a son, Dori, 20.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Joseph Smith, 55, and his wife, Sarah, died today in a fire which swept the upper floors of a four-story rooming house at 200 East 49th street.

A dozen other persons were carried down ladders to safety.

Chicago, Jan. 24 (INS)—Trapped by fire in a wooden garage used as a combined home and office, Joseph Scarr, 70, a junk dealer, and his sister, Anna, 65, died today.

Ottawa, Jan. 24 (AP)—Two persons are dead and two injured as a result of a fire which demolished a six family dwelling in suburban Eastview last night. Occupants were driven out in night attire into the bitter cold of a raging blizzard.

Mrs. Thomas Gladman, 40, and her crippled daughter, Gwen, 20, burned to death.

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 24 (AP)—A mother and two young daughters burned to death today in a fire which destroyed their home at Benton's Ferry.

Vineland, N. J., Jan. 24 (AP)—The body of Vito Scarpa, 27-year-old volunteer fireman, was found today in the ruins of the home of his brother-in-law, Frank Rizzo. The Rizzo home burned last night.

ROOSEVELT AAA PROPOSAL DEAD

The plan of controlling production through the soil conservation act of last year is dead and nothing to take its place.

A project is underway for legislation to set up 48 "little AAA" systems, one for each state. This would call for state legislation as well as national. When explained to Senate Democratic leaders, it drew a frown and the observation that it was very cumbersome.

For the present, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Chester A. Davis, who administered the now defunct AAA, must write a new farm program bill.

400-Pound Job Appeals to Briton

If Civil Service Commissioner Thomas H. Green can't use that 400 pounds salary increase that he retused—well, E. Roberts of Murford, Jubilee avenue, Grantham, Lincolnshire, England, would find the 400 pounds very acceptable.

The civil service commissioner received a letter from Roberts today, stating that Roberts had read in the London Daily Express about Green's refusal to accept a $2000 salary increase.

"It would appear from this," wrote Roberts, "that the civil service positions are very remunerative. I suggest, therefore, that you create a vacancy for myself, offering the said 400 pounds per annum."

However, young Mr. Roberts of Lincolnshire probably will have to remain in England, the commissioner said, because there are no jobs open. Roberts is assistant to the accountant of an electrical supply house, is 25 and is married.

Reprieve Given Slayer in Utah

Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 24 (US)—Condemned to face a firing squad at dawn today Delbert Green, confessed triple murderer, was saved by a last minute reprieve granted by Governor H. H. Blood. The reprieve was given pending Green's appeal to the Utah Supreme Court for a sanity hearing.

SECOND DIGEST POLL OPPOSES 'RAW DEAL'

Anti-New Deal sentiment reflected in the nation-wide poll of the Literary Digest was similarly registered in a supplementary poll taken of the magazine's subscribers.

Only a fractional percentage difference in voting against the administration's acts and policies divided the two polls.

The subscribers' poll showed a percentage of 62.94 opposed to President Roosevelt and his policies as against 62.66 per cent registered in the nation-wide vote taking.

38 STATES OPPOSE

Only 10 states showed a majority vote in support of the New Deal in the subscriber's poll and while the remaining 38 states cast adverse majorities.

Again, New England showed the heaviest vote against the New Deal, nearly 4 to 1, in the magazine subscriber's analysis.

The Middle Atlantic states followed, with the farm belt third, voting 3 to 2 in opposition to the administration.

COINCIDENCE IN MAINE

A striking coincidence was found in the case of Maine, whose percentage in both polls were exactly the same—20.33 per cent "yes" and 79.67 per cent "no" to the question: "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt 'New Deal'" to date?

A third poll conducted among the clergymen of the country, will be undertaken by Literary Digest to ascertain the stand of the spiritual advisers on the New Deal.

Burglars Carry Off Safe With $300

Burglars entered the office of Louis H. Jacobs Co., in Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, during the night and stole a small safe containing $300 in cash and $2500 in checks.

Officials of the firm discovered the loss today after finding a window and a door had been forced. The safe, 20 inches square, had been wheeled out of rear door and placed in an automobile.

IL DUCE RAISES NEW EUROPEAN WAR THREAT

London, Jan. 24—The world crisis, which had abated on the death of King George, flared anew today even before the British monarch is laid to rest.

The Mediterranean situation, where Anglo-Italian tension has threatened war several times in the last four months, became acute again with publication of an official Italian protest to the League of Nations against Britain's great naval moves in the Mediterranean.

It protests also against Britain's understanding with France, Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia for mutual aid in event of conflict with Italy.

ITALY'S PROTEST

It reaffirmed "explicitly" that Italy does not intend her colonial action in Ethiopia to "constitute a menace to European peace."

Hence, Italy protested, the Mediterranean security actions were unnecessary and dangerous because they disclosed that military conversations had taken place between league members against another league member in preparation for an "arbitrary and non-existent hypothesis."

At the same time, 23 additional British warships arrived at Gibraltar, bringing British strength in the Mediterranean to a record peace-time level.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Mussolini's high commander in Africa, reported to Rome "complete victory" for the Italians at the end of a three-day battle in the southern Tembien mountains.

"HELL ON WHEELS" ARRIVES

Down in the arid Ogaden, General Rudolfo Graziani, mounted in modern fashion on a truck, rode at the head of his "hell on wheels" column into Neghelli, capital of Galla Borana.

This climaxes a six-day drive in which the southern army plowed straight through the heart of Ras Desta Demtu's Ethiopians and seized all the water holes within 250 miles of Dolo.

These reports of Italian success followed upon Ethiopian claims that "thousands of Italians" had been killed in the Tembien battle, and that Ras Desta, son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie, was yet undefeated in the south.

In London it was learned the League of Nations' technical committee, which meets next week to consider oil sanctions against Italy, will include representatives of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Norway, Sweden and seven or eight oil-producing nations.

JAPANESE WAR THREAT BARED

Moscow, Jan. 24 (AP)—The Russian war commissariat organ, Red Star, today accused Japan of preparing for military operations against the Soviet Union through the encirclement of outer Mongolia.

The newspaper said the Japanese, by making inner Mongolia "a Japanese colony," commanded the principal approaches to outer Mongolia.

This movement, said the Red Star, would put Japanese troops in a position to attempt cutting off Russia's far eastern army.

7 More in Vermont O. K. New Milk Pact

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Cold Blasts Chill Police Chair in Fall River

Arthur Lyman, However, Finds Warmth in Political Air

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics, and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, or both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

When The Senator comes in he is blowing on his fingers and is stamping and in general making a great dither, and behind him, as he closes the door, there follows a blast of cold air which would warm the cockles of no heart, even if there were cockles to any hearts that could be warmed anywhere in a modern way.

THE SENATOR

The Senator's blowing on his fingers and his stomping of his feet are very amusing to Timmie, who is slaking his thirst with a noggin of steaming water which bears no slight flavor.

"Do not tell me, Senator," says Timmie, sipping another sip of the profits, "that you cannot take it."

"I can stand anything, Timmie," says The Senator, "except being left out in the cold, and we will make no quibbles about this cold weather, which is even colder than a successful candidate's cold shoulder to his loyal supporters."

"I can see," says Timmie, "that you are in considerable of a merry mood except that it is slightly in reverse. Would you have," says Timmie, "a bracer of something which I have concocted for myself in the warding off of chill blasts?"

Slight Chill in Fall River

Anyone can see that The Senator reacts to this suggestion on Timmie's part, and it is very gratifying to the boys when The Senator says as how maybe the hangers-on would like the same.

"Speaking of being left out in the cold, Timmie," says The Senator, "I understand that there is quite a rumpus over the rapidly-chilling seat in the Fall River board of police commissioners, which was being readied for warmth by Lyman Lynch of the old fight game."

"Governor's Councillor Phil Russell of Fall River," continues The Senator, "has Lynch all set for the job when Senator Billy Conroy of Fall River, who was once a very excellent dancing master, goes into his dance and holds up the Lynch nomination by Governor Jim.

"It seems that Senator Billy wants Simon Sullivan, the printer, for the job, but that Councillor Phil, who is the old boxing instructor, is tightening up for a very pretty fight in the matter. And to complicate things," says The Senator, "there is a third candidate, John Leary, an auto salesman, who has the backing of former Assistant Attorney General Arthur Seagraves."

Timmie nudges out a steaming bowl before The Senator, and then Timmie says:

"There is one lad who will not be left out in the cold, and this is a very able lad by the name of Arthur T. Lyman, who is the state commissioner of corrections and a very excellent citizen. Many are there who would like to be in the shoes of Commissioner Arthur, because I understand that all the boys who are looking forward to the Democratic nomination for governor want Commissioner Arthur as their running mate for lieutenant-governor."

Timmie is doing the old nod, up and down, up and down, and with every down he catches up a slight sip of his flavored water.

Lodge to Get Nomination

"The old balance wheel is the thought that comes to me," says Timmie.

"They would all have no worries," agrees The Senator, "if they get Commissioner Arthur, but as we hop over to the other side of the political fence, I see before me a vision of many Republicans who are worried no little about being thrown off balance by Mister Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., the representative who is a candidate for nomination for the United States Senate.

"There are some, I have no doubt," says The Senator, "who will underestimate the resourcefulness of this grandson of a famous statesman, but it is very great resourcefulness and will result, I am predicting, in the nomination for young Henry.

"This lad," continues The Senator, "is a former newspaper man in Boston, New York and Washington and at one time he makes a trip around the world and interviews all the heavy guns in the various nations, Benito Mussolini being his hardest approach. There are many letters and credentials which are being carried by young Henry to get him in and interview Mussolini, but they are no go until he thinks to pull out a newspaper card which carries his picture. Well, this card gets him in to see Mussolini, and what is it but an old Boston police card which is signed by the late Michael H. Crowley, the police super."

Timmie nods in agreement and he says:

"There is one man, Senator, that never leaves anybody out in the cold."

At this point, The Senator takes a very destroying haul at his steaming water with the high flavor and then he stands up his collar around the ears.

"One month from today, Timmie," says The Senator, "the ball clubs will be in the sunny Southland and I wish you the same."

But the Senator gets only a dirty look from Timmie as The Senator goes out and leaves the door open behind him for the full whisk of the freezing blasts.

NEW DIALOGUE TEST OFFERED

Attention, readers, here is the final picture in the comic dialogue contest, conducted by the Boston Evening American and Loew's State and Orpheum theaters. Incidentally, it's your final chance to share in the list of cash prizes and guest theater tickets to be awarded winners.

You can enter the contest today, by procuring copies of the Boston American from last Monday up to today. Five pictures have been published in all.

The contest is sponsored as a personal tribute to Parkyakarkus, a Boston boy, who has made good on the air and is now being featured in his first motion picture, "Strike Me Pink," starring Eddie Cantor and opening at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters today.

The first prize will be a cash award of $10; $5 will be given the second choice; $2.50 each for the third and fourth selections and $1 each for the following five. The next 25 chosen by the judges will each receive a pair of guest theater tickets for either Loew's State or Orpheum Theater.

Address your letter to the "Strike Me Pink" comic dialogue contest editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass.

It must be received before Sunday midnight, January 26.

IOWA EDITORS BACK LANDON

Topeka, Kas., Jan. 24 (US)—Governor Alf M. Landon was interviewed yesterday by a group of Iowa newspaper editors headed by Carl Cook, chairman of Iowa Republican State Central Committee. The delegation had luncheon with the Governor and spent more than two hours talking with him on national economic and political problems.

After the visit Cook said:

"There is every evidence that Iowa is turning strongly Republican—and when I say this I am sure I know more of the Iowa political situation than Jim Farley."

1928 Hoover Nominator Hints He's for Landon

Los Angeles, Jan. 24 (US)—Inferential support of Governor Alf M. Landon, tax reducing executive of Kansas, was voiced today by John L. McNab, San Francisco attorney who placed Herbert Hoover's name in nomination at the 1928 Republican convention in Kansas City.

McNab made this significant statement:

"I think the next Republican convention in the selection of its candidate should seriously consider one who thoroughly understands the agricultural situation in the Middle West."

Life Story of King Edward VIII

Infant Prince Rocked In Ancestral Cradle

King George's First Born Now Is King

GREAT QUEEN HELD CHILD IN ARMS

gagement to the Duke of Clarence, her fiance died (the House of Hanover, like our own Washington family, has always suffered from a weak bronchial apparatus) she quietly accepted the fact that now she must marry his younger brother, the late King George. There seems to have been no argument.

The young Princess of Teck, as usual, did her duty, although at that moment it was impossible for her to foresee the many years of a happy and apparently completely congenial companionship.

As for her husband, he too made his sacrifice without a murmur.

In using this rather ominous word, I want to make it very clear that I do not refer to his marriage to a woman whom thus far he had always regarded as his future sister-in-law.

But the late King loved the life he was leading, better than anything else. The sea gave him what he craved above everything else—privacy. He now would have to give up his naval career and contentedly himself for the rest of his days with intricate and complicated affairs of state and pomp, and circumstances which were to be closely interwoven with his private existence and which were very foreign to his nature, for at heart he was a very simple man.

I once knew some one who knew some one who knew the late King George V, quite well. The story he told me (he-dee-dee comes to me fairly directly. I merely repeat it because it is such a revealing story and it sounds so true that nobody could possibly have invented it.

The King, during a conversation, had told the friends of my friend what he would do if he could really do what he wanted to do. He would take his biggest car and would go as far as it would carry him. There he would find a simple farm house. In that simple farm house there would be a simple white-washed room with a simple little bedstead and an open fire. And the King would lie in that simple iron bedstead and he would look at the open fire and he would rest. For once in his lifetime he would really rest.

Uncomfortable as most fathers with their first offspring, the late King George V holds the son who this week succeeded him as King Edward VIII, in his arms when the baby Prince is christened.

Held by Victoria

So much for the parents of the baby that was born shortly after 10 o'clock of the morning of the 23d day of June of the Year of Grace 1894. On July the 11th he was baptized. His great grandmother (who was to spend the next few years making up parcels of warm woolen underwear for her grandson's rapidly increasing family)—his great grandmother, who was not easily amused but who dearly loved christenings, held him in her arms when he received the names of Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David.

The second one (to please his great grandmother) was that of the late and unforgettable Prince Albert, but in the eyes of his grandmother, Queen Alexandra, it was also the name of her first born, the late Duke of Clarence.

The third one was the name of his grandmother's father, the Duke of Glucksburg, afterwards King of Denmark.

The other four, that were added for good measure, represented the patron saints of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, respectively.

With these names and the obligatory silver mugs of the four godfathers or their widows, we can safely leave him to his nursery in White Lodge, the old keeper's lodge of the house which Cardinal Wolsey had built himself within a short distance from London when he enjoyed the favor of his rather undependable royal master, bluff old King Henry VIII.

Royal Cradle

The nursery itself was a fairly small room, for nothing in the small, two-story house could be called spacious. The most conspicuous piece of furniture of the nursery was a cradle which Great Grandmother Victoria had kindly sent down from Windsor Castle. In this same cradle all her own children had spent the first months of their life.

The old Queen, who all her life long dave remembered the very humble beginnings of her own childhood days, was a saving turn of mind and she hated to throw things away that might still come in handy.

That cradle came in very handy indeed, for in rapid succession four other children were born to Prince George and to his young wife. All of them survived. All of them (though each in his own fashion) proved to be good sons or daughters. All of them are now married. Three of them have children of their own.

Whether King Edward VIII ever marries or intends to remain a bachelor is a matter which concerns nobody but himself and which is not a subject for public discussion. Every man has a right to his own life and, in this respect at least, a King is entitled to the same privilege as the humblest of his subjects. But whether he does or whether he does not, the English throne will hardly run the risk of becoming vacant through a lack of lawful candidates.

There are enough of them today to stock a number of other countries with young men and young women who have all the necessary qualifications for the exceedingly difficult and highly exasperating office of acting as a nation's chief executive at a time when fully 99 per cent of all their subjects seem to feel that they could do it ever so much better than their master if only they were given half a chance.

And here we reach a point which is of the utmost importance, not only to the vast British dominions, but to the future of the entire world and which well deserves our most careful consideration.

I happen to be 12 years older than His Majesty. Like a great many of my readers, I have therefore a very clear recollection of the sentiments that prevailed among the majority of the people while the little prince (who did not become Prince of Wales until much later in life) was learning to ride his first pony and was being told that great-grandmamma was much too great a lady to be kissed on the cheek. One kissed Her Majesty's dimply old hand and then only with very noticeable expressions of the utmost respect.

Well, I think that most of us who have now reached the half century mark, (when we care to be entirely honest with ourselves), will confess that thirty-five years ago we thought that the institution of royalty, even the institution of a scrupulously careful constitutional sort of royalty, was very decidedly running on its last legs.

I do not mean to imply that there was any personal bitterness in this feeling.

Ideas Change

None of us, at least in the northern part of Europe, had any reason to dislike our sovereigns who as a rule were amiable and well mannered old gentlemen with side whiskers and ample golden watch chains, or their rather dowdy consorts, who were given to pony carts and good works.

But the nineties of the last century were the heyday of the great age of enlightenment. Public ignorance was rapidly disappearing before the rising sun of a carefully planned system of wholesale education. Soon a sovereign people would no longer need the guiding hand of their betters who were supposed to hold their high office by the grace of Divine Providence.

Everywhere parliaments were expanding their power. Newer and better constitutions were the order of the day. Even the monarchs themselves seemed to have noticed the handwriting on the wall and were putting aside a little money for a rainy day, heavily investing in American railroad stock so that when the rainy day actually came, they might peacefully retire and educate their sons and daughters to become self supporting engineers and respectable housewives. That was exactly 35 years ago.

Today, that part of royalty that was weighed and found wanting has been rudely swept aside and the entire fabric of their unless lives has been destroyed beyond all hope of repair.

But that other part of royalty, that was also thrown into the dangerous cauldron of war and revolution but survived the ordeal—it seems to be more firmly entrenched in its ancient privileges and prerogatives than ever before.

It would now be almost as preposterous to suggest to an Englishman or a Swede or a Hollander or a Belgian that he change his form of government from a monarchy to a republic as it would be if a member of one of those nationalities were to advise us to abolish the office of President and to fill the White House with a sultan or a king.

What does all this have to do with a babe in a cradle in a small house in a London suburb, even if he has seven names, three of them those of mighty potentates and four of them those of equally mighty saints? Just about everything, as I shall try and show you tomorrow.

(Mr. Van Loon's biography of Edward VIII will be continued in a third chapter in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Will Rogers Gives Prince a Chew

HUMORIST AND FUTURE KING TALK HORSES TOGETHER

(The fun-loving "Prince Charming" that America knew, the man who is now Edward VIII, was a youth of many sides. Here in the continuation of his story, which began with his Massachusetts visit, the light is turned on some of his characteristics that the American public missed seeing.)

By ALAN C. FRAZER

CHAPTER IV

At 11 o'clock on the night of Wednesday, September 3, 1924, Will Rogers stuck his gum on the wall of his dressing-room at the New Amsterdam Theater on 42d street, where the Ziegfeld Follies were playing and hastened off to Locust Valley, L. I.

He had a fresh supply with him, however, for a little after midnight he offered a stick to the Prince of Wales.

That broke the ice at what had been, up to that moment, a "high hat" party to the defeated British polo team at the Piping Rock Club.

Will put his arm around the Prince's shoulders and told him some stories right off the Broadway griddle and talked cattle-raising. The Prince at that time had 150 head of Shorthorns on his 4000-acre ranch in the foothills 70 miles from Calgary in Western Canada.

They talked horses, too. A week and a half later the Prince auctioned off his polo mounts and Will got one of them, a chestnut gelding, for which he paid $2100. Will gave it to Patricia Ziegfeld.

Praised Riding

Later that morning Will kept an appointment for polo with the Prince at the W. R. Grace estate, where the British polo-ists had trained.

"That boy rides well and he rides ponies that are hard to manage," said Will to his audience that night.

"You should have seen those horses he rode today. Beauties. He knows horseflesh when he sees it. But they handed me a couple of 'dogs.' I could have gotten off and outrun them myself. I felt like inviting my ponies to saddle me and take the mallet themselves.

"I suppose you'd like to know what the Prince is like. Well, he's got a fine war record and he's broken all records, except maybe that of Queen Marie of Rumania, for traveling. But, gracious, folks, he's just a boy-just a boy.

"But don't let that fool you. That boy is there! No kidding. Why I kidded him, and all those brass hats, or whatever you call them, at that affair down at Locust Valley looked like they wanted to take me out and teach me manners. Yes, sir. But I guess my Cherokee blood stumped 'em.

"Say, the Prince liked it. Folks, you know that's the test of a great man, a big man. Make no mistake about it. Don't ever try to kid a little man. No, sir; the little guys can't take it. If you're going to do any kidding, why pick out someone who's really big but who don't put on any front about it."

They say the Prince's eyes sparkled, like any ranchman's, when he learned that Will bought one of his horses.

Will also liked to tell about the Prince's trip to Washington for the informal luncheon with President and Mrs. Coolidge and John, on that 1924 visit to America.

"They just had a nice, friendly, homey little chat," said Will. "Yes, sir, a friendly talk-fest. Great Britain and America. They had Mrs. Coolidge and John there so our side wouldn't lose out by default."

But after the luncheon, and a brief reception in the Blue Room at which cabinet members and their wives were presented to the Prince, the royal visitor and President Coolidge retired alone to the presidential office.

What they said there, neither ever revealed, but when the Prince emerged he handed the press a statement. He had written it during those 15 minutes in the Coolidge office. It was addressed to the people of Washington.

Thanks People

"I would like to express my very deep gratitude to the people of Washington for their kind welcome to me on this hot day," he wrote.

"To have a chance of paying my respects to the Chief Executive of the United States has been eagerly anticipated by me, but I did not expect that affectionate reception which the citizens themselves afforded me.

"My present visit to this country is purely a holiday one, but the charm of it is enhanced by the manner in which it is being received in all quarters. I thank you all very much."

"(Signed) Edward P."

Five years earlier the Prince of Wales had tiptoed into a bedroom at the White House to grasp the thin, white hand of a sick man, who smiled wanly and spoke with visible effort.

"Sir," said President Wilson, "your grandfather slept in this bed, in this room, when James Buchanan was President. Abraham Lincoln slept here, too."

The Prince thanked him for recalling it and wished him a speedy recovery.

Eleven years and more have passed since the Prince led the gayety on the North Shore, in New York and in several Canadian cities. He is no longer a world traveler. He is no longer a reckless, dashing horseman. He is a man with a garden of his own, who still likes to play around some, but likes also to sit and talk nights with friends of long-standing.

As Will Rogers said:

"Make no mistake about it."

Edward VIII may be surrounded by constitutional barriers that circumvent a British king. But Britain has not got a puppet on the throne. The erstwhile fun-loving youth that America saw, with a point of view established by the great conflict, with a mind of his own and a spirit touched by the ferment of this age, may find a way to assert himself among the graybeards, the stuffed shirts and the elder statesmen.

(The story of England's New Bachelor King, as Americans saw him and what America missed seeing, will be continued in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Belmont Veteran Has King's Note

Following the death of King George of England, Clifford Nugent of Belmont, who during the World War was a sergeant in the 76th division of the 301st supply train, today ferreted out a souvenir which the late sovereign presented him.

Nugent received "a message to you from His Majesty, King George" when he arrived in Avonmouth, England, presented to him for the King by the lord-mayor of the township.

The message was a touching welcome to the American doughboys who crossed the Atlantic to help win the World War.

The American boys were feted at the museum in the town, given hot cakes, biscuits and tea and presented a letter mimeographed from an original written by the King.

The message reads:

"Soldiers of the United States, the people of the British Isles welcome you on your way to take your stand beside the armies of many nations now fighting in the Old World the great battle for human freedom.

"The Allies will gain new heart and spirit in your company.

"I wish that I could shake the hand of each one of you and bid you God speed on your mission."

The letter was dated April, 1918.

WINDSOR CASTLE.

Soldiers of the United States, the people of the British Isles welcome you on your way to take your stand beside the armies of many Nations now fighting in the Old World the great battle for human freedom.
The Allies will gain new heart & spirit in your company.
I wish that I could shake the hand of each one of you & bid you God speed on your mission.

George R.I.

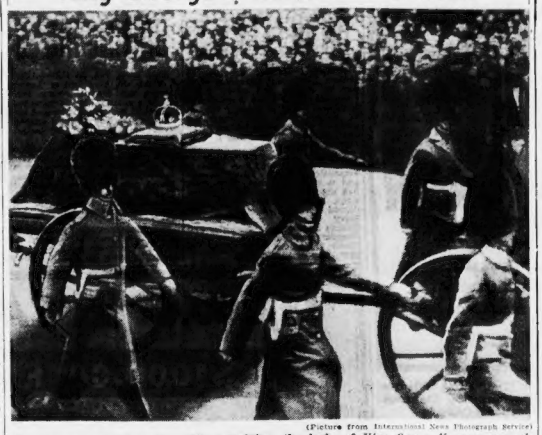
King George V Returns to London



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Borne on a gun carriage, the coffin containing the body of King George V was conveyed through the streets of London to Westminster Hall, where the dead King will lie in state. Thousands lined the street to see the funeral cortege, many dropping to their knees as it passed. The casket, surmounted by the jeweled crown of the empire, was escorted by Grenadier Guards. This picture was transmitted across the Atlantic from London by radio.

KING EDWARD SHOWS STRAIN

The young king, showing signs of fatigue and strain, motored from his apartments in York House, St. James' Palace, to Buckingham Palace in one of the cars his father often used.

There he set to work dealing with a mass of state papers and official documents requiring his prompt attention.

British Cash Fine Refused by Court

Robert C. Swan, 21, Harvard business school student and son of a millionaire London contractor, learned in Dedham district court today that English money is not acceptable in United States courts in payment of fines.

Assessed $25 for speeding in Wellesley December 7, Swan tendered a five-pound note in payment. Probation Officer Walter Bagley refused to accept it.

Swan explained he had just returned from Bermuda and had no United States money with him. Judge Clifford B. Sanborn suspended the fine and gave him permission to send the money after he had made the exchange.

THOUSANDS PASS BIER

King's Body Viewed by Throng

BRAVE COLD RAIN

Braving a cold rain in their long vigil, the rest of the queue was a mixture of all classes, many of whom brought camp stools, rugs, vacuum flasks and blankets, all of which they were instructed to leave outside.

Most of the mourners observed rules of silence as they moved, unhalting, past the bier lying in the semi-darkness.

Meanwhile the London press opened a campaign strongly condemning the impudent rapacity of those attempting to turn the nation's grief to their own financial advantage."

This was the result of demands already being made for as much as $50 for a seat on the route along which the funeral procession will move to Windsor.

LIGHTS DIMMED

Inside immense Westminster Hall the huddlers that had blazed so brightly only a few months ago when King George received the plaudits of Parliament on his jubilee were turned low, and the light from the sunless day without, filtering through stained glass windows, left the gloom of the somber scene unrelieved.

The king's coffin lies on a high catafalque of deepest purple velvet in the center of the carpeted room. An embroidered pall, surmounted by the royal standard, covers the casket wherein rests the king in his red coronation robes.

A single wreath is on the standard, and in the center of the pall, on a silken cushion, is the imperial state crown, studded with magnificent jewels, including the black prince's ruby, as large as a hen's egg, a 309-carat diamond, and four other rubies, 11 emeralds, 16 sapphires, 277 pearls, and 2783 diamonds—the most valuable crown in the world.

CROSS BACK IN PLACE

The maltese cross that surmounts the two crossed arches of the crown was jolted off as the coffin rolled heavily across the station yesterday. A guard quickly picked it up and it was back in place today.

Below the crown lies the single, unset, Cullinan diamond, a breath-taking gem of 516½ carats and an inch and a half across, its facets catching the gleam of candles and flinging brilliant colors from the bier.

Draped at the foot of the coffin is the scarlet King's color of the Grenadier Guards. Six tall candles, of unbleached wax, one at each corner and each end, flicker in the gloom, casting weird shadows on the vaulted rafters. A tall cross stands at the foot.

There is a wide dais of several steps around the catafalque, and on the top step but one is the inner circle of the King's Guards—four crack Life-Guardsmen in scarlet and white uniforms, gleaming knee-high boots, and helmets with long white feathers dangling all about. Their heads are bowed, and their hands rest on the hilts of their drawn swords.

KING'S BODYGUARD

Facing the north and of the hall, their backs turned to the catafalque, are four gentlemen of the King's bodyguard, wearing long dark blue coats and helmets with white plumes.

The outer guard around the catafalque is composed of yeomen of the guard—the "beefeaters" in their blue and red uniforms of quaint Tudor design, so familiar to tourists visiting the Tower of London.

The "beefeaters" are mostly elderly men, usually former army men, now in the service of their king. Some wear on their breasts medals denoting that they were present at the coronation, 26 years since, of the king whom they now guard; one or two were even in Westminster Abbey when Edward VII was crowned, and if they do not follow King George before another year, they may see Edward VIII don the glittering crown that now rests on the casket.

They stand with their pikes—medieval battleaxes—reversed. Each half-hour the guards are relieved, day and night, the change of guards taking place silently, without a word of command.

The file of mourners, passing through daily for these four days from 8 a. m. until 10 p. m., is kept a few yards from the six-stepped dais by guide ropes.

The kings who are coming to the funeral are those of Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, Norway, Rumania and, of course, Edward of England.

BIRTHDAY BALL TICKETS MEET BIG DEMAND

A flood of requests for tickets and boxes to the President's birthday ball at the Boston Garden Thursday evening, January 30, is coming in daily to the committee's headquarters at the Parker House.

Proceeds from this nation-wide affair are to be used to combat the scourge of infantile paralysis.

Mayor Mansfield purchased his tickets for two boxes from attractive Jean Gatto, a Cambridge girl, who is the leading lady in "Three Men On a Horse."

Other subscribers for boxes include District Attorneys Warren L. Bishop and Edmund Dewing, Postmaster Peter F. Tague, Walter V. McCarthy, commissioner of public welfare; Joseph P. Carney, head of Reconstruction Finance Corporation here, and Judge William Welch.

But despite the imposing array of persons and organizations who have purchased boxes, the committee reported that the greatest support for the birthday ball plan to fight infantile paralysis came from the unpublicized throng who have bought thousands of $1 admission tickets.

BATTLE LOOMS ON DELEGATES

Frederick Butler, associate of former Lieutenant Governor Gaspar G. Bacon, and many other prominent Bay State Republicans continued today to classify the list of delegates to the Republican national convention credited to by John Richardson as being a "pro-Hoover slate."

A rival slate may be drawn up, Richardson, Republican national committeeman for Massachusetts and a staunch Hoover supporter, has not as yet released his selections, but the reports circulating named former Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, George F. Booth of Worcester and Congressmen Joseph W. Martin of North Attleboro and Allen T. Treadway of Stockbridge.

SLOAN'S SAFE DRIVING RULES

New York, Jan. 24 (UP)—Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, tells how to reduce automobile accidents. He declares that the public wants high-powered cars and that the way to avoid mishaps is to modernize driving instructions and train drivers.

Writing in the February issue of Good Housekeeping, Sloan says:

"Too many 90-horsepower cars are being driven with a 30-horsepower point of view. Driving at 60 miles an hour is just as different from driving at 20 as bicycling is from horseback riding."

It is haste instead of speed which causes accidents, Mr. Sloan declares. Thirty-six per cent of accidents occur in urban centers

Martha Lee — Tasteful Oyster Dishes

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

American versus European cookery has long been a subject of endless discussion among those interested in the culinary art, with America getting the short end in most cases.

But here is no less an authority than Harry Kinchler, the genial manager of the Engineers' Club, saying most emphatically that American cookery is superior to European for several reasons.

Better ingredients are used, equipment is more efficient and we have the benefit of the combined knowledge of all countries. Certainly good news after hearing for such a long time that we will never be a nation of epicures!

Here are two other oyster recipes taken from that excellent new cook book of Lucy Allen's, "Modern Menus and Recipes," which is so interestingly written that it will appeal to all lovers of good food. These baked oysters on the shell and baked oysters on spinach are delicious appetizers.

BAKED OYSTERS ON SHELL

1 teaspoon finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic
2 teaspoons chives
1-3 cup sweet butter
6 oysters on the half shell
2 to 3 tablespoons finely sifted bread crumbs
3 slices bacon
Rock salt.

Chop onion, garlic and chives very fine and pound with wooden mallet. Then mix with the butter and rub through a fine sieve. Place the oysters on the half shell, cover them with the prepared butter, sprinkle with a few bread crumbs, and then lay over each a small, thin piece of bacon. Place the filled shells on a bed of rock salt in a baking pan and put into a hot oven for about 10 minutes or until the bacon is crisp. This serves only two people.

BAKED OYSTERS ON SPINACH

18 oysters on the half shell
1½ cups cooked spinach
¼ cup cream
2 tablespoons flour
Grated Gruyere cheese
Fine, sifted bread crumbs
Tarragon vinegar
Salt and pepper
Rock salt

Prepare the spinach by cooking it with a bit of soda in the water; then chop it fine and mix with the cream and flour and season highly. Put a spoonful of this spinach mixture in the bottom of each half shell and, using a spoon, sprinkle a few drops of vinegar over each one. Lay an oyster on the spinach in each shell, cover them with a thin layer of cheese and the finest of bread crumbs and put under the broiler until the crumbs are brown. If one has fresh tarragan leaves, chop fine and sprinkle them over the tops.

Screen Star Asks Safety Sticker

All the way from Hollywood Errol Flynn telegraphed today to the Boston Evening American asking that he be sent an "I Do Not Drive to Injure" sticker for the windshield of his car.

The star of the motion picture, "Captain Blood," also revealed in his telegram that he will be confined in the Cedars Lebanon Hospital for the next two weeks following an appendicitis operation.

Just a month ago the movie star was in Boston, coincidental to the showing of "Captain Blood," and at that time aided the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund by appearing for an afternoon at fund headquarters in Devonshire street.

He had left Boston when the safety drive by these newspapers was begun, but word of the drive reached him on the coast and today's telegram was the result.

Next 150 awards $5 each	750.00
185 Prizes — Total	$3000.00

3. The contest is open to everybody—men, women, boys and girls—except employees of the Boston American, theatres and motion picture companies listed in this contest, and their families. It does not matter where you live. It costs nothing to play this game.
4. The composite pictures must be cut out, assembled and pasted or pinned together. Below each picture must be written or printed the name of the movie star.
5. In all, 108 pictures will be printed—three every week-day for six weeks. Pictures are to be submitted only in complete group of 108. Hold the pictures until you have the 108. Then send them to Movie Faces Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., P. O. Box 1035. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on your entry. All pictures must be in Boston American office by midnight 15 days after the last set is published. We cannot undertake to return any entries.
6. Each entry should be sent by first class mail—postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the post office department. Contestants may send in as many sets as they wish but no contestant shall be entitled to more than one prize.
7. Accuracy will count. Neatness will count. No elaborate sets are necessary. Simplicity is best.
8. You need not purchase the Boston American to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the originals in the Boston American and assemble the pictures from the copies you have made. Copies of the Boston American may be examined at Boston American offices or public libraries free of charge.
9. The Judges will be a committee appointed by the Boston American. Their decision will be final. In case of ties duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

All players will be selected from the following studios: 20th Century-Fox Films Corporation, Paramount Pictures Corporation and Warner Brothers Picture Corporation. The movie stars may be seen on the screen at the following M & P Theatres:

MODERN ELECTRIC IRONING

Saves Time and Reduces Fatigue!

This picture of a child operating an electric ironer is important for two reasons. First, it demonstrates how simple and easy modern electric ironing is. Second, it shows how restful this ironing method can be. You'll notice the little girl is sitting down.

But there's one thing this picture doesn't show. That is, how much electric ironing saves your time! Flatwork — from hankies to sheets and pillow cases — rolls out in seconds instead of minutes! And, once you get the hang, there isn't any ironing job you can't do — down to the fussiest of fluffs and ruffles with less than half the work it takes by hand!

Once upon a time electric ironers came high, but a glance at the terms on the right will show you how easy it is to own one now!

Fashionables Brave Zero Weather To Attend Concert

By BETTY ALDEN

THESE TALES of old New England fathers braving the rigors of an old-fashioned winter are all right in history books . . . but we want Old Man Winter, who arrived last evening with icicles in his beard and a breath as frigid as the wild winds that howled about Admiral Byrd's bleak village in Antarctica, to know, that he is distinctly not welcome nowadays . . .

Those early citizens of Massachusetts looked upon their hardships as a sort of righteous trial and endured them accordingly . . . But, though their modern descendants in Boston's Back Bay have no such ideas, they just as readily venture forth to flout the elements and keep their social engagements . . .

MAURICE AMES

Last evening the harsh, frozen caress of Old Man Winter's glacial palm set them digging into cedar chests and moth balls for all sorts of warmer garments . . . Then, dressed in the usual formal evening attire, yet muffled in shawls, blankets, fur bootees and bandanas, Beacon Hill and Back Bay socialites piled out of their taxis and limousines and made a quick shivery dash into Jordan Hall to attend the concert of Povla Frijsh . . .

Almost every time the doors swung open to admit a party of new arrivals we saw an ancient sealskin cape or coat which hadn't seen the light of day for years and years . . . and bandanas, shawls and lace squares were wrapped in all kinds of queer ways to protect noses, ears and throats . . .

Maurice Ames contrived an outfit that combined both comfort and style and looked very prim and youthful in her bonnet of black Persian lamb which matched her coat . . .

• • •

Miss Elizabeth Leland in Velvet Gown

"I'VE GOT ON everything but a heating pad," exclaimed Mrs. William Brace Pratt as she shed her Persian lamb coat and then the coral velvet wrap with an ermine collar which contrasted so effectively with her lovely gown of amethyst crepe . . . She was accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Leland, who wore sapphire velvet with a jacket trimmed with gold metal cloth . . . Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall felt much in the same predicament as Mrs. Pratt when it came to unwinding herself from a silk scarf, a silver fox fur piece and a long sealskin coat with a large mink collar . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bradley, Mrs. Guy Warren Walker and other members of their party whisked through the doors like a puff of wind . . . Mrs. Bradley was gowned in filmy black lace and Mrs. Walker's snowy white hair was a striking contrast to her wine red velvet gown with a long train and matching slippers . . .

Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney lent distinction to the gathering as did Mrs. Randolph Morgan Appleton and Mrs. Phineas W. Sprague for whom the cold held no terrors while she was wrapped in her long white Chinese embroidered coat which is lined with white fur . . .

• • •

Mrs. Howard Slayman Wears Black Velvet

ALSO DISCERNED among the concert goers were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Slayman . . . the latter in black velvet with a long fitted coat of scarlet velvet making an effective contrast with her long tawny hair . . . Miss Jean Sears, all in blackberry with a tiny hat to match . . . Mrs. James Cunningham Gray with her daughter, Miss Catherine C. Gray . . . Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs with Miss Rebekah Hobbs . . . Mrs. Henry Lee Higginson wearing a black crepe gown with a long moleskin and fox coat . . . Mrs. J. Harleston Parker . . . Dr. and Mrs. Edward Hamlin, Jr. of Milton . . . Mrs. W. Rodman Peabody with her daughter Anne . . . Dorothy Cornish . . . Mrs. Warren McPherson of Cambridge . . . Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thorndike . . . Mrs. Charles White and Mrs. Charles Toppan who always looks very lovely in evening attire, wearing a lame silk gown with a squirrel wrap . . .

Mrs. Louis Agassiz Shaw arrived simultaneously with Mrs. Francis W. Bird and Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer and still others present were Mrs. Roger Warner with her daughter, Miss Rachel Warner, Mrs. Charles French, Mrs. George Lyman, Jr., Miss Alice Stackpole, Mrs. Wilder Wheelwright and Mrs. George Lee . . .

• • •

Betty Soule can endure the chilly weather much more easily than most of us, because she knows that in less than a month she will be on the high seas bowling merrily along toward warmer and sunnier climes . . . Her trip, aboard a private yacht with friends, will eventually take her to Barbadoes . . .

Lecture Schedule

Although Mrs. Samuel Eliot of Chestnut Hill is retiring as chairman of the Children's Hospital Welfare Committee, she will continue to work for the charitable cause as a member of the Avery lecture committee. She will be vice-chairman, working under Mrs. Frank H. Stewart and Mrs. Samuel D. Warren, co-chairmen of this popular lecture course which benefits the hospital.

A tentative schedule of subjects for Miss Avery's lectures during the latter part of this month and through next, has been announced. Tomorrow morning she will discuss navies. She has chosen "China" for her subject on the 31st, and on the seventh will delve into the current topic, "Pressure Groups and Government Control in America." On February 14 she will discuss Russia, on the 21st agriculture and on the 28th Mexico.

B. C. Juniors Plan Gala Week

With Boston College . . . junior prom activities last an entire week. Tea-dances, hockey games, concerts and dramas in the offing for the third year men and the event.

The week opens Sunday with a Communion breakfast in the Newton Assembly Hall and the publication of the week's publication, Junior Pic. John J. Donelan of Roxbury is chairman of the breakfast and Vincent F. Crowninshield is editor of the humorous magazine.

On Tuesday afternoon, activities continue with a tea dance at the Hotel Westminster. The presentation of "Silas, the Chore Boy" is the feature of the evening's entertainment. The comedy will be enacted in the Boston College auditorium by a complete junior cast under the direction of Stanley J. Driscoll.

The college orchestra and glee club will combine for Wednesday's program . . . a concert in the evening at the library auditorium. Frederick Carmody is chairman of the event.

Color and spirit will prevail at the hockey game at the Arena when the college team meets Loyola University seniors Thursday night. Boys and girls will bring their skates to make merry at an ice party afterwards. John J. Burgess, chairman, claims it will be the gayest and jolliest event on the calendar.

Promenade on Friday night climaxes the activities of the week. The setting is the main ballroom of the Hotel Statler . . . Peter Murphy is in charge and marshals of the evening include Joseph McCardy and Edward Hart.

Delegates Feted at Tea

THE PROGRAM of meetings, luncheons and dinners for the American Alumnae Council, now in session at the Hotel Continental Cambridge, was pleasantly altered this afternoon, with a tea given by Simmons College.

President and Mrs. Bancroft Beatley and Dean Jane L. Mesick of Simmons acted as hosts and Mrs. Beatley and Miss Mesick presided at the tea tables.

Others who assisted in making the guests welcome were Dr. and Mrs. Robert M. Gay, Miss Alice L. Hopkins, Miss Nora H. Stone, Miss Margaret D. Chrisler, Miss Gertrude J. Burnett and Miss Dora B. Sherbourne, all of whom are members of the administration and teaching staffs of the college.

The hostesses from the alumnae association were Mrs. James E. Bates, who came up from Providence, R. I. for the occasion; Mrs. F. D. Cooper of Brookline, Miss Gadys Bigelow of Newton, Miss Lucy Fuller, Miss Eula Ferguson of Boston and Miss Marjorie Shea, who with Mrs. Gardner T. Bolster of Radcliffe, is concentrating for the entire conference.

Movies for Children

Mickie Mouse and the other animated movie stars have a universal appeal to both youngsters and their parents, judging by the number of extra reservations for the next day of "Merry Movies" to be held at the Repertory Theater for the benefit of the House of Mercy.

The following seem a prominent women have already reserved seats for their children or young friends: Mrs. T. J. Frothingham, Mrs. G. M. Proctor, 3d, Mrs. L. C. Fenno, Mrs. F. H. Tappan, Mrs. F. C. Cabot, Mrs. Endicott Peabody, Mrs. Henry Parkman, Mrs. A. P. Loring, Jr.

Lecture on Royalty

Countess Gives Talk

COMING at a time when European royalty and aristocracy are of prime interest to everyone, the lecture on the "Political Hostesses of Europe" which Countess Judith Listowel, wife of William Francis Hare, fifth Earl of Listowel and Viscount of Elsmore, gave before the audience at Mrs. William Dana Orcutt's "Morning of Discussion" at the Hotel Statler yesterday, was both timely and interesting.

Taking her color note from her guest of honor, Mrs. Orcutt wore a black dress trimmed with white satin.

Assisting her in welcoming the guests and plying them with steaming cups of coffee were Mrs. Russell G. Feesenden, whose green hat just matched the warm coloring of her dress; Mrs. Robert of Stevenson who also wore a matched hat and frock combination of brown; Mrs. Charles F. Hovey, in a plaid blouse and woolen suit; Mrs. Robert Treat Paine and Mrs. Henry Melcarthy Parker.

Thrilling Novel Of the Air Mail

By LEWIS R. GRANT and LEWIS GILBERT BROWNE

It took three men to prevent Lou from running into the flaming wreckage that was pinning her husband down.

It was Tay Lawson who kept his head and did the daring thing. He followed the stream from the chemical engine, a pry-bar in hand, and pried loose one of the folded wings [illegible] held Tex down.

Tay and Baldy lifted T out to the stretcher. Both [illegible] a stream from the chemical to put out the flames on their clothes. They were rushed along to the hospital with Tex [illegible]

Jake and [illegible]

Tex [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Tell me—what—what—

[illegible]

He was conscious a bit, grinned at Jake and spoke to his wife, then passed out again.

"Passed out!" Dizzy gasped, not understanding.

Hated Himself

Dizzy watched Tay and Baldy depart, and he [illegible] more than ever. [illegible] heroes—he had played [illegible] got his best pa[illegible] make a date. He [illegible] found one of the h[illegible]

"I'm Clark's pal," he said, "if you need a blood transfusion, send for me."

Mary came to the hospital, on receiving word from J[illegible]

There was nothing that any of them could do.

Tex [illegible] to the airport that Dizz[illegible] wanted at the hospital. He explained to Jake about his [illegible]

"Go to it—I've got men enough to take the mail—let me know his condition," was all that Jake could say.

Tex [illegible] the need of a blood transfusion and when Dizzy got there he ran into Lou and Mary in an emotional [illegible]

"Lou," he said, softly, "I—it sounds silly for me to say I'm sorry. I'm always too late. I'm always wrong—but, Lou—you know I'm sorry."

Lou Speaks

"Don't worry," she interrupted. "I'm not going to shout. I don't think I'll ever shout again. Tex is like a little boy. I thought I had to shout to him to make him understand. It won't do any good to hurt you, Dizzy. Tex wouldn't want me to hurt you, but I have to say it. You are no good. You are just no good. You never have been any good. Oh, I know you are a great pilot, but people are more important than flying, and everyone you touch, you hurt, even your friends. You have acted [illegible] anyone in all your life. [illegible] hated [illegible] you [illegible] when you got [illegible] kept you in a job, and what did you do? You began hurting people. You hurt Tommy—she isn't your kind, and you know it. You hurt Tay Lawson, as grand a boy as ever lived. You made Tommy hurt him and they lose each other. And what about Tex—and me? Next you'll hurt Mary—"

"No! So help me, Lou—"

"She doesn't know what she is saying, Dizzy," she whispered. "Tex, she does. Mary, she's right. I'm no good. I'm poison, even to my friends."

Dizzy Helps

Half an hour later, unknown to Lou, he was giving a generous blood transfusion to Tex.

That evening he reported to Jake, a little sorry but feeling that he had done what little he could.

"I know—it ought to be cyanide."

"Forget that stuff, Tex has got to pull through, and as for you, it's time you learned to play the rules."

"I guess I never play anything straight, except flying."

"You lied to me, and you lied to Tex, about being sick, so that Tex could take your run and you could try to make a girl fall for you who is a million times too good for you. Isn't that so?"

"Jake—I—"

"Isn't that true? You lied to me, didn't you, Dizzy?"

"Yes, Jake—I lied to you."

Fashion Congress Approves Victorian or Classic Touch

EVENING gowns are again swinging to the back! And can you think of any more glamorous approach to formality by night than the shimmering loveliness of fluid silk—rippling and flowing over your figure in a classically beautiful lean line from shoulders down? It's really the back of the regal princess gown (left) that gives it such a grand manner, however. Modeled by Miss Leslie Blake, society mannequin, the dress is a Victorian blue-and-fuchsia bow-knot silk, with rippling fulness below the waist, hinting at a cascading bustle. The print is one of the very new ribbon designs and as refreshingly welcome as the first spring crocus. Two small green velvet bows in the model's hair are the sole accessories. The dramatic white crepe, right, shows more good backing, even to the row of tiny white buttons which march down to meet the skirt. A matching crepe jacket makes it appropriate for informal dinner or party wear. Both these gowns are remarkable proof of the fact that good taste and luxurious simplicity need not be necessarily costly. The white crepe, modeled by Miss Caroline Oveson at the third meeting of the Fashion Congress of America, is priced under eleven dollars, while the Victorian bow-knot print, to make you look like a goddess, is slightly over sixteen dollars. If you would like to know the name of the Boston store where these youthful and flattering gowns may be purchased, call Annice Brink, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American.

Keep Children Healthy

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOT so long ago I told you about the decrease in infant mortality. I pointed out that the baby today has a far better chance of surviving the first year of life than the baby had 25 years ago.

Today, I want to speak about some of the ways of keeping the young child well.

A child may be backward in his school work, not because of mental deficiency, but because of some physical defect. Enlarged and diseased tonsils and adenoids may retard the progress of the school child.

One with poor sight or hearing is unable to compete with his schoolmates. In consequence the child is uninterested in his studies. He is discouraged and may become delinquent.

It is amazing to see the improvement, mental and physical, that takes place when the physical defect is corrected. The child no longer appears dull. He learns faster and certainly is a lot happier.

Many parents fail to realize what will happne to a child who cannot keep up with his school work. This is the penalty of be[illegible] absence from school. Chronic coughs, colds, sore throats and the infections of childhood serve as stumbling blocks to the child's welfare.

CORRECT DEFECTS

The time to take the youngster to the physician is before real illness appears. A thorough physical examination should be made. If there is any defect it should be corrected.

School conditions promote the dangers of communicable diseases. Of course, every child should be vaccinated against smallpox and immunized against diphtheria. If you live in a section where typhoid is prevalent, it is advisable to have inoculations to prevent that.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 34

MY throat was "choky" at Mary's little paean of triumph: "But, anyway, nobody can take our five days away from us."

What a [illegible] soul she was, this beautiful young bride, facing with Amazonian courage a double-barrelled situation which she did not deserve.

Many brides have "in-laws" who dislike them, and some have to cope with old flames of their husbands determined to remain in the picture.

But for a girl to believe that her husband's powerful father wished to wreck her marriage, and facing the prospect of having him bring back into her life a girl whom she detested, and who had done her best to make mischief upon the very wedding day itself—these were unusual problems to be thrown into the loving face of a bonny bride.

But she had eased herself in the armor of memory. Those five lovely, blissful days, isolated from a[illegible] world, which they had wrested almost by main force from the plan the self-centered Philip Verrizen patriarchally and with princely generosity had conceived for them, were forever Noel's and Mary's, beyond the power of any [illegible] to take away from them.

The door closed upon her slogan, for indeed, she had made a battle cry of her last words, and I slumped into my chair, more fatigued than I liked to own, even to myself.

When I opened my eyes, at the mere suggestion of a touch upon my shoulder, Lillian was standing by my chair, looking down anxiously at me. I was not surprised that I had not heard her come into the room, for when she chooses, she can be as noiseless as an Indian is popularly supposed to be.

"I am not asleep," I said defensively.

"Would it be such a crime if you were?" she retorted gaily. "Since when has it been on the forbidden list for a convalescent to take a nap?"

With a quick movement, she drew a chair opposite mine, and, seating herself in it, leaned forward and peered at me attentively.

"Is it as bad as that with Mary?" she asked. "She looked so like an 'army with banners' as she came out of here and carried Noel off, that I hoped she was well over her perfectly justified emotional breakdown, or—perhaps I am wrong, and she didn't have one."

"You were not wrong," I told her dryly. "I have seen Mary in angrier moods, but never one so grief-stricken as was hers tonight. But she rallied wonderfully, and I think she'll be able to cope with her father-in-law beautifully, as well as manage the Avis Arlen situation."

"Mary's a born trouper," Lillian assented. "But she's going to need every bit of courage and resourcefulness she possesses to salvage her marital happiness in the first year. I never have doubted R[illegible] [illegible] she triumphed

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Symmetry of Form

By DONNA GRACE POKED BY IDA LUPINO

THE billowy, overweight girls are always telling me how ardently they long to be slender—only to be back once more to the lithe, slender, graceful figure they once had.

They assure me they would do anything if it would cause the too solid flesh to melt." They mean it, too.

Reducing is not easy and really calls for a lot of sacrifices and willpower aplenty. That is the reason I am in sympathy with those girls who have tried for a while and just gave it up, as I do, grieved and nothing accomplished.

It is not their fault altogether that they do not slim down to the desired lines. The systems may not be effective enough to be interesting, and all methods of reducing should really have enough intrigue to hold the attention.

The most difficult and stubborn resistance we have is in the hips and thighs. They often hold out long after we have banished all the other padding.

Do you want to know my sure and effective method of conquering these unwelcome and most unlovely curves? You can do this yourself if you will use the right method. You may have mine, and there is no charge for it. Just send a stamped self-addressed envelope and it will be mailed to you. Address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Don't Be Shy

IMPROVE YOUR CONVERSATION

AT ease with everybody, always able to chat entertainingly on any subject when there's a little constraint in the air, or boredom, or huffiness.

That's Beth—and don't you envy her this ability!

It's not delving into any deep problem, or showing off any special knowledge, or talking of unusual experiences or wide travels? No indeed, Beth's not learned, traveled, or widely experienced.

So what does she talk about? Let's listen.

"Mrs. Carter, how do you train a puppy to sleep in a basket?" she asks gaily. "Ours insists on sleeping on the mop, instead of on his nice pillow."

And after a discussion of silly ways of pets has lasted a few minutes, you hear her telling young Jane, "Bobby's just finished a handsome birdhouse, and he can't quite understand why the birds refuse to nest in it this winter!"

Again, she has everybody amused at what she saw downtown.

"A monkey got loose from an organ grinder and climbed up on a fruit stand. When anybody came near him he threw lemons at them. Finally the owner got a grip on the little wretch's tail."

If she gossips, it's always friendly gossip.

"I was so delighted to hear of Rose and Marian's engagement, weren't you?"

Or, "Harry is getting on beautifully in his new job."

Just the kind of pleasant chat any of us could manage, if we'd take the trouble to notice the funny, queer, human, little things in the world around us.

A good talker "gets places," to all the best parties, among all the nicest people. Go over your own conversational stock with the help of our 40-page illustrated Home Institute booklet, IMPROVING YOUR CONVERSATION. Don't be shy and tongue-tied. Most Difficult of Jobs Is Job of Being Good Stepmother

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A stepmother's job is the hardest in the world. Only a super-woman can handle it with success.

Here, more than anywhere else, tact and understanding must go hand in hand. It is a task fit to challenge the dramatics of a Barrymore and to rattle the brains of an Einstein.

Difficult under ordinary circumstances, the job of stepmotherhood is doubly difficult when the woman has children of her own.

With love-blinded eyes she regards her babies and sees only that which is good. But the other woman's children—her eyes are wide open when she looks at them. The bad is magnified, their mistakes assume the proportions of terrible errors. Life becomes unbearable.

Stepmothers must resolve to realize their job IS the hardest job they can tackle. They must arm themselves with courage and a genuine determination to succeed at any cost.

That is the advice I'm giving today to a stepmother who is prepared to break up her home and return to her parents. She's jealous, terrible jealous. But she wouldn't for all the world admit it.

Wasn't Mrs. F. S. C.'s letter to "Puzzled" wonderful yesterday? I read it over and over. It's going to do "Puzzled" a lot of good, I know. It may, even save her home and give her little sons and daughters the security every child should have.

Mrs. F. S. C. wins the five-dollar prize I'm awarding today. Tomorrow I shall award another five-dollar prize for one of the letters I'm publishing today. And Saturday I shall award an additional prize of five dollars for the best letter of the week.

So write to me, readers. And I'll write to you. Tell me your troubles. Or help others to solve theirs. In any case, you may win a prize YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am a young girl, only 20 years of age. I am married and the mother of a beautiful baby. When I was first married I was alone with my husband and we were very happy. At least, I was.

I was always flying my home, trying to make it a really comfortable place in which to live. And I succeeded.

A few months after my baby was born my husband, who had been married before, brought his two sons to live with us. Then everything changed.

These boys know I am young and consequently they are disobedient. Even their father has no control over them. When people visit us they always remark how bold the children are.

I have a good education and would like to know if it would be the right thing for me to go back to work. I could easily support myself and my own baby. My folks will welcome me back anytime, because they know my husband is unfair to me.

AN UNHAPPY WIFE.

Dear Child:

Like many stepmothers you are jealous. You'd never admit it, I know. But just the same you ARE jealous.

It is almost a super-human task for a woman to regard her own child and those of another woman with the same affection. It's one of those things that challenges the best that is in us.

No matter what your baby does, it will be wonderful. Your eyes will be blinded with love. But when your husband's son by another marriage does anything, your eyes will be wide open. They'll magnify the faults and go searching for the slightest flaws.

You don't have to break up your home and go back to mother unless you want to. You can, and YOU WILL, if you're a real woman, make up your mind to stop being jealous, to win the affection of your stepsons and to exercise common sense.

But if you intend to go on entertaining this ridiculous jealousy and hatred, pack up your things and rush back to your parents as soon as the train will take you.

In your present frame of mind, you can neither be a loyal wife nor a good mother.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

To the parents of the 16-year-old boy who is so unruly, I'd like to give this advice. Act quickly. If you are not able to handle him, turn the job over to some person who can.

More than anything else, this boy needs discipline. Don't think for a minute that a thin cane or cord he will behave himself. Put him into a school, preferably a military school.

There, he will come in contact with all sorts of boys, some of whom will put him firmly in his place.

I hope the parents of this boy will not have to suffer as I have suffered. My boy is dead. Now that he is gone, I realize how much his father and I failed in dealing with him.

Me, too, used to threaten to leave home. We lived in constant fear of his going. We catered to him and let him have his own way in everything. We were willing to do anything to keep him with us.

But that did no good. In spite of all our efforts to keep him satisfied and contented, he was restless and hard to please. Finally, he did leave home and for 10 long years we never heard a word from him.

Then one day a message came. He was dying. A few words scribbled as he lay desperately ill were brought to us. He had at last realized the heartaches and worry he had caused and he begged our forgiveness.

My boy is dead. My willful, lovable boy is dead. And we, his father and mother, were responsible for making him what he was.

I hope other parents may profit by our mistake.

CONNECTICUT.

DEAR BAD MOTHER.

How sorry I am for you and your husband. You thought you were doing the right thing, and you failed.

But your son realized his mistakes before he died. His last sad words were words of regret for the sorrow he caused you. That is consolation.

He was not really bad, I know. Just willful and stubborn like the boy to whose father you address your letter. I know it will help.

You're kind and generous and I love you for it.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 19 and at the present time I am working in one of the large department stores as a typist.

Recently, I have been attracted to a certain man with whom I think I have fallen in love.

The only trouble is he is twice my age.

Miss Fairfax, should I tell him I love him or should I just forget him.

Is it possible for a girl to fall in love with a man almost as old as her father. Or is this just an infatuation? ALICE.

MY DEAR ALICE:

Is it possible for a girl of 19 to be really in love with a man twice her age? Many young women your age have married men "old enough to be their fathers" and have been truly happy.

But I always advise against it. There can be little in common between a girl entering upon the brightest, most glamorous years of her life and a man approaching middle age.

No, I wouldn't marry him if I were you. At least I'd think it over for a long, long time.

So many young women who marry middle-aged men later meet boys of their own age and fall desperately in love that I wouldn't run the risk of the unhappiness that must result.

Dear girl, I'd stick to my typing for a while longer. At 19 you do not have to be in a hurry.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl 17 years of age and I have a brother 18. Although he is a big, strapping fellow and very good looking, he persists in "showing off" and making life miserable for me. He thinks he is a "cave man."

Whenever I have girl friends visiting me, he does all he can to make me feel ashamed. He persists in pointing out to them all my defects and faults and gives away all my secrets.

Don't you think it is bad enough to have faults without always being reminded of them in the presence of strangers?

Honestly, Miss Fairfax, I am getting so I can hardly stand the sight of my brother. I've thought of going away from home, but this would break my mother's heart.

You have helped so many others. I wonder if you won't answer my letter and tell me what to do. VIOLET.

Dear Little Violet,

Your brother loves you as every brother loves his sister. He doesn't mean half the things he says and he wouldn't hurt you for the world.

The trouble is he's too young to understand. Like many boys of 18, he thinks he's being funny.

You call him a "cave man" and you're right. Just a few years ago he was a boy—and always before him was the fear of a spanking from Papa, or a harsh word from Teacher.

All of a sudden he found himself a man. He could swing a bat and knock the ball far into the infield. He could lift as heavy a weight as Father. He could do a man's work.

Because all this is new to him, he's "showing off." You're his victim because you're the one he loves more than anyone else.

Soon he'll be older. Then he'll court some girl, and you'll be helping him out by telling her what a fine, big brother he is.

Bridge

Bidding a Freakish Hand

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In all of the best books and articles on Bridge much emphasis has been laid on the mathematical aspects of the game.

The opinion is widespread that a "mathematical mind" is required for proficiency at Bridge.

But, as a matter of sober fact, many of the greatest experts of the game are more weird than wonderful in their knowledge of the oldest science.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♢	1 ♠	2 ♢	3 ♢
4 ♢	4 ♡	5 ♢	5 ♡
Double	Pass	Pass	Redouble
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding was about as normal as could be expected in so freakish a hand.

West opened the Ace of spades and followed it up with the nine of diamonds. East won with the Jack and returned the seven of spades. At this point South went into a long huddle. Unless West had started with the singleton Ace of spades, the dummy would furnish discards for all of the doubtful clubs.

The only other chance for the contract was the club finesse—merely a fifty per cent chance.

But south went deeper into the matter. If West, a very fine player, had held the King of clubs, he would have recognized the necessity of obtaining a trick in that suit before relinquishing control of the spade suit.

He would have led a club, or a low diamond to enable his partner to lead a club. West had obviously underled at least the Ace and more probably the Ace-King of diamonds with only a singleton in the dummy!

South therefore ruffed the spade with the nine, drew the trumps, and took the club finesse.

WEDDING GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I am going to a wedding very soon and I would like to know a few things.

1—My boy friend's pal is to be married. Is it proper for me to buy a gift or is it up to my boy friend? (I am also invited.)

2—The couple reside in a different state and I am unable to meet them until that evening. To whom should I give the gift and what should I say?

G.

1—Your boy friend's gift should be sent separately from yours. Since you are invited to the wedding you will probably wish to send a gift, and it should be sent "on your own."

2—Send your gift as soon as possible before the wedding, two weeks or ten days before. If you wish you may have it sent from the shop in which you buy it. Enclose

THESE FACTS ABOUT BRAN HAVE BEEN PROVED BY TESTS

Supplies Gently Acting "Bulk" to Aid Regular Habits

Now and then, in talking with your friends, the subject of bran has come up. So that real facts might replace unsupported opinions, the Kellogg Company has aided for some years research in leading nutrition laboratories.

Studies made on a group of healthy women showed that two tablespoonfuls of bran daily continued to relieve constipation* over a period of months. How different from cathartics—where dosage often must be increased.

Another series of tests on men indicated that, with some people, the "bulk" in bran was much more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables.

Further tests showed that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provided vitamin B and iron as well as "bulk." This "bulk" absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the system — the right way to correct constipation.

Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity. Either as a cereal, with milk or cream, or in cooked dishes. It is a natural laxative food. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

DEATH WITNESS IMPEACHED IN LATITO CASE

George F. Howard, mechanic at the North Shore road garage, Revere, was impeached as a government witness today in the second degree murder case of Peano Latito, in Suffolk Superior Court after Howard had repudiated a signed statement he had given police.

Howard, under cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan, said he had told the truth because he was afraid of physical injury.

The statement, signed one week after the killing of Durkin, in prison on the night of November 25, charged that LaTito went into the cell of Durkin and struck him.

GOT NO THREATS

Sullivan asked him if any prisoners or officers made threats for the purpose of getting him to sign the statement.

"I figured to protect myself," testified Howard.

After he had signed it, he said, he was afraid of physical harm.

"Were you threatened with physical force?"

"No," replied Howard.

TELLS OF CHANGING BOOK

He was asked by Sullivan if he had ever worked in a [illegible] pass bed before he [illegible]

Howard replied that he was one of several prisoners assisting in changing of an entry [illegible] books.

He admitted he had erased original entry [illegible] ing of LaTito [illegible]

This entry had been erased after the [illegible] out of [illegible] bill substituted.

Daily Tax Fact

By B. C. FORBES

Noted Financial Writer

Sunk to the bottom of the sea would be both the largest ship afloat, the Normandie, and America's largest ship, the Leviathan, if they attempted to carry, in gold, our federal debt now within sight.

But, of course, there isn't available in the entire world anything like that amount of gold.

The grand total is estimated at only $27,000,000,000. Of this, the United States owns $10,000,000,000, or 43 per cent.

The tragic fact is that sooner or later, we or our children will have to sweat blood to atone for the Roosevelt administration's squandermania.

Let us hope we—and the nation—won't be sunk.

Coulter had been fined $50 and sentenced to 30 days in jail for profanity.

Passengers Unhurt In Upset of Plane

Hartford, Ct., Jan. 24 — Two passengers in a Boston to New York plane escaped injury today when the craft tilted into the snow on landing at Rentschler Field here and bent the propellers.

Tax Attack

Yazoo City, Miss., Jan. 24 (AP)—J. J. Halford, Yazoo county farmer, came to town to pay his taxes. He walked into the sheriff's office and asked how much he owed.

When the sheriff told him, he collapsed in the officer's arms. Physicians say he has little chance to recover from a heart attack.

Alabama Negro Executed by Gas

Raleigh N. C., Jan. 24 (AP)—Allen Foster, 29-year-old Birmingham, Ala., Negro, was asphyxiated today for attack on a Hoke County white woman. It was the first gas execution east of the Mississippi river.

Eleven minutes after the electrical apparatus operating the gas generating equipment was tripped, physicians pronounced Foster dead.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

It is not unpleasant, after writing about the great dead (whether genius or kings), and about the future of Empire and will Edward VIII succumb to leap year, to write, however briefly, of pleasant living people who are interested in the same things we all are interested in, namely, comfortable living and good food, and pleasant drinks—things which go a long way to reconcile one to the present weather.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The other afternoon I had the pleasure of meeting a French gentleman who gave impression of living up to all the specifications of a French gentleman. Not quite old enough, perhaps, to pass for "an old moustache" but of the type, though more pacific. White brows that bristled over alert, friendly, interested eyes. Roman nose above a restrained dragoon moustache brushed up at the ends. The figure of a boy, poised and alert, as he greeted one. Fluent English with a rather better accent than most Americans can muster in French. And courtesy and interest which seemed inexhaustible.

French Director's Visit To America His First

It was Monsieur Victor Rey, managing director of the company that owns or supervises all the hotels that have the right to call themselves Ritz or Carlton or a combination of the two. He has been visiting in America, several weeks in New York, this week in Boston, then on to Chicago, the coldest and windiest city on earth, down to Washington and Miami and Baltimore and back. Then over to London, I gathered, and finally back to Paris to make sure that no gadgets have got into the gears in his absence.

It was, he said, the first time in his life that he had an extended holiday—at least, so I gathered—certainly the first time in his life he had visited America and had seen how we are carrying on the great art and profession of hotel keeping which we have inherited from the French.

At least, I do not suppose that the United States inherited the German tradition of hotel hospitality, nor the Spanish nor the Italian, nor even the Dutch—where they give you many cheeses and salamis and chocolate for breakfast!—but a basic tradition of the English hotel with, superimposed on it, the French. Today, obviously, far more French than English, with a few remnants or leftovers of old American habits which we refuse to give up.

Finds Rey Is Acquainted With Novel by Bennett

Apparently he had had a nice time in Boston. He had been admitted into the arcana of the Boston Bonifaces. They had not only fed him well but welcomed him to their professional discussions. I cannot guess what those were—perhaps the problem of how many slices a good carver can get out of a ham, that classic problem of old Vauxhall, of what to do with guests who snitch the silverware or who practice bouncing their checks, or want unsalted butter, or sugar and vinegar on their baked beans—in other words the problems of hotel keepers all over the world. And he dined with an inner circle of gourmets, just to show him that as a people we can do it as well as anybody in the world.

One doesn't quite know what to talk about to the Managing Director of the Ritz hotels.

I tried him out rather timidly on the literature of hotel keeping—the fiction, that is—and was interested to find out that he knew Arnold Bennett's lengthy novel called "Imperial Palace," that fable of the Englishman to whom the job of managing a chain of the deluxest of de luxe hotels was the grandest job in the world, one for which he was willing to throw over the loveliest of American millionairesses and marry his own manageress of the hotel laundry, who liked good hotel keeping, too.

Good Time in America Hoped for Our Visitor

A grand novel! But, alas! M. Victor Rey did not know "Work of Art," our own Sinclair Lewis' novel about the Connecticut boy who grew up in a fourth rate American hostelry on the Sound, rose to be manager of (presumably) the new Waldorf, set himself up in business and lost his shirt, and at the end is left still believing that even a tourist camp can be made the finest of all tourist camps. In him the divine fire of the good hotel keeper burns with the pure gemlike flame of the artist.

I shall never be able to afford to stay at any of M. Victor Rey's hotels abroad. But anyway, I hope M. Rey likes America and has a good time here. His is a great profession.

'Al Smith' To Indict Raw Deal

SEES FOREIGN RULE IN U. S.

Smith's speech will be heard over radio station WAAB tomorrow night

New York, Jan. 2 (AP)—The New York Sun said today that Alfred E. Smith tomorrow night at the American Liberty League dinner in Washington "is prepared to analyze, indict and repudiate the New Deal policies."

The sun in an article written by George Van Sicke, its political commentator, that the former Democratic standard bearer "will brand the experiments of the last three years as undemocratic, unamerican and Communistic."

"When he has spoken, Mr. Smith will have placed himself and all those who think as he does entirely outside the New Deal's breastworks," the article said.

"There will be no pussy-footing and no evasion of the issue. The former nominee for President . . . sees the nation at the crossways."

The Sun continues:

"If the New Deal policies are to become the rule of the land, Mr. Smith sees a no wand foreign rule set up on this soil, far afield from anything fostered by the Democratic party since the Constitution was written . . .

"It will be an indignant speech voicing the sentiments and emotions of millions of constitutional Democrats who still abere to the principles of Jefferson, Cleveland and Wilson."

As to whether Smith and those who line up with him will break completely with the Democratic party, the Sun said

Yale to Close Leet Oliver Hall

New Haven Jan. 24 (AP)—As an economic move in reduction of maintenance costs Leet Oliver Memorial Hall, used for recitation purposes, will be closed, it was announced today at Yale University.

Few students or instructors will be affected by the change. At present the hall is used only 75 teaching hours a week.

Norwood School Head Resigns

Leonard W Grant, for nine years superintendent of the Norwood public schools, resigned today. It was announced by John J Conley, newly-elected chairman of the school board. The reason for his action was not disclosed.

Neutrality Bill Report Is Delayed

Washington, Jan. 24 (INS)—In the face of Republican protests against haste, the House foreign affairs committee today postponed a vote to report the Administration's neutrality bill favorably to the House.

The Democratic majority however had broken off vital talks on the measure, which is expected to be reported to the House and acted upon next week.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Hips, Hips Away! Here's Exercise

By IDA JEAN KAIN

[illegible] hips and forms the nadir to [illegible]

It is when the muscles of the trunk are allowed to go practically into disuse that one's figure assumes the general contours of a Bartlett pear. However much curves are in vogue, hips and heft are fatal to symmetry, so hips must go.

The term "hips" appears to be all inclusive and is mistakenly used to designate the projection below the small of the back, anatomically termed the buttocks.

But since hips are hips to the modern Eve the buttocks must be included to get the measurements. Therefore, pass the tape around the buttocks and just under the frontal hip bones. Remember that for the sake of symmetry this circumference must not exceed the bust measurement by more than two inches.

Up to Exercise

With bulky hips, the thighs are quite likely to be more than generously padded. Unfortunately, muscles—not fat—give the body form.

The fact that the front portion of the thigh is usually firm and shapely is due to the fact that it is controlled by the rectus femoris muscle, which is contracted in standing and used in such movements as rising from a sitting position, climbing up stairs, etc.

Exercise is the only process that can streamline bulging hips and thighs. Dieting can't. You may know from experience that single-handed dieting reduces the throat and face and all the other wrong places, but never affects the hips. Back dieting with special hip exercises to turn the trick.

MOVEMENT: Swing one leg backward, the other forward, keeping legs straight, toes pointed. Reverse action with a rapid movement and be sure to swing the under leg in as wide an arc as possible. Use the pad of fat on the side of the hip as both a cushion and a pivot.

Send for the complete set of illustrated hip exercises. This daily half dozen are guaranteed to reduce the size of hips and thighs. Do them regularly to be happily hipless.

Dies Rather Than See Doctor

STRANGE CASE OF JOHNSON

Dramatic details attending the death of Arthur Johnson, wealthy Beacon Hill lawyer and a nor whose funeral was held today, were revealed also by Dr William J. Brickley, medical examiner.

Dr. Brickley pictured Mr Johnson as possessed of a medicophobia, dying in his ornate mansion at 9 Louisburg square refusing the pleas of his housekeeper that a doctor be summoned.

Mr. Johnson died at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, [illegible] from pneumonia.

Refuses Doctor

Permission for the cremation of his body was given under law by Dr. Brickley, who inquired into the death after receiving notice from Dr Frederick J Bailey, deputy health commissioner of the cremation plans.

Law requires notification of a medical examiner when a cremation is planned within two days of death.

Dr. Brickley said he made a thorough investigation because he found the case to be "unusual" and that he was in accord with all findings and pans.

The medical examiner said he learned from the housekeeper, Miss Mary Walsh, that Johnson had had a distaste for doctors and refused to have one in spite of her urging.

One was finally called Tuesday evening and found Mr. Johnson critically ill. A trained nurse was summoned and the doctor made several visits during the night in an attempt to stave off death.

Mr. Johnson's age appeared on the death certificate as 53.

He was a member of an old Salem social registerite family, received his education at Harvard College and Harvard Law School. He was married in 1919 to Miss Joanne Bird Shaw, youngest daughter of Charles Sumner. They had no children.

Charles Sumner Bird Jr., [illegible] attorney, was named on the death certificate as the person who furnished the family history for the record.

ANN MARSTERS

"We were well organized to meet the situation," he said. "The minute the snow stopped all the farmers got out with their yokes of oxen and sleds, and drove, one after another, through the main roads of the town, making two paths through the deep snow.

Farmers Drove Standing Up To Open Roads Through Town

"Often there were ten or a dozen in the procession. The farmers drove standing up—and some wore fur caps, made of muskrats they had trapped themselves, and they all wore boots and huge mittens padded with wool and covered on the outside with bed ticking or calico."

He said that there was always great excitement when the oxen passed, for that meant the opening up of the road. Then people could go out in their sleighs. Snow came early and stayed late and the winter was one of the best times of the year.

Oh well—progress hath its sting.

Job Open for Woman With All Social Graces

At a beautiful and exclusive private club in Maine (I'll tell you the name later) there is a grand job awaiting some young woman who wants a job through the summer. And I am hoping, through this column to find just the right person for it.

She must be between 20 and 40. She must possess practically all of the so-called "social graces" and she must be attractive—reasonably so. She must know how to arrange card parties and teas and dances for the guests—and I think that's about all.

Will those of you who would like the position and who feel sure that you are "Just the person" for it, please let me know.

And by the way—there is a very fine salary connected with it as well as lodging and meals.

COHAN

Bringing His New Play to the Colonial

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Following a swing through the Midwest, George M. Cohan has decided to bring his new play "Dear Old Darling," to Boston for a two weeks' engagement at the Colonial Theater, prior to Broadway.

The great George M. will be in town for Washington's Birthday, giving his host of fr[illegible] something else to wave a flag about. He makes his debut [illegible] the Boston stage on March [illegible]

Chardon Quartet, Gives Concert at Harvard

By RUTH MARSTERS

The Chardon String Quartet presented the second concert of the Schubert-Brahms series of four last evening in Paine Hall Music Building at Harvard University.

Last evening's performances of the Schubert quartet in E Major Opus 125, Number Two; Edward Burlingame Hill's First String Quartet; Brahm's Quartet in C Minor, Opus 51, Number One, were such as to prove the occasion no exception.

The keen anticipation attendant upon the first hearing of Professor Hill's new work was, in performance, amply justified.

For it is a beautifully written work — concise and compact — revealing complete command of the medium of the string quartet.

Its charm lies in its freshness, its wit. Never dull or heavy, it has the virtue of being long without seeming so.

The Chardons evidently felt at home in this music. Their sensitive and spontaneous performance was in effect all that the music demanded.

The audience was extremely cordial in its reception of the work. Professor Hill was in the audience and with the Chardons shared the applause.

Benny Film

Jack Benny will be seen in his latest film, "It's in the Air," on the Boston Theater's screen beginning today. Also shown at this house is "The Case of Lucky Legs," starring Warren William.

Frivolity, Mystery In Film

By HARRIS MORGAN

Romance, mystery and frivolity are represented on the Paramount and Fenway screens where "The Murder of Doctor Harrigan" and "Paddy O'Day" are being shown.

Doctor Harrigan meets his untimely end in the corridor of a hospital just as he is about to operate on a former business associate. The latter is a patient named Pete. Melady, owner of a drug company, who possesses a priceless formula for an anaesthetic. He has cheated several people out of their interest in this drug, called Sleepan, one of whom is the doctor attending him.

• • •

Of course there are plenty of folks around the institution who don't care whether Dr. Harrigan lives or dies. For one, there's his second wife, confined there for the present with a fractured arm. The present Mrs. Harrigan cares not a whit for the unfortunate's medico, preferring a handsome gigolo named Ladd. In fact, just preceding the crime, her current boy friend was smuggled out of the building by a nurse named Sally Keating, for fear the physician be subpoenaed by the police.

Miss Keating also gets herself deeply involved in the mystery by taking a dose of the sleeping draught from Melady's room at the request of his daughter. Joan Melady fears the doctor will do away with her parent, for revenge, so she drugs him to prevent the operation.

• • •

Complications ensue when the excited hospital staff discover that not only has their chief surgeon been slain, but his prospective patient is nowhere to be found. It takes the wit and perseverance of a handsome young interne, Dr. Lambert, to solve this baffling mystery in the end. His interest in so doing is motivated by his love for Sally Keating, wrongly accused in the case.

Kay Linaker, legitimate stage player, makes her motion picture debut in this film. She is a slender brunette, rather like Rosalind Russell in appearance. Miss Linaker gives a very capable performance here in the role of Sally Keating.

• • •

Jane Withers, that mischievous little rascal of the screen, keeps up the good work she started when she used to appear in support of Shirley Temple, in "Paddy O'Day." Miss Withers is also seen as an orphan child from Ireland who finds herself alone in New York.

Pinky Tomlin croons a lot of new song hits in this, and the lovely Rita Cansino lends her beauty in the role of Russian gal Fannie, has continued to be one of her closest friends.

• • •

All of Agnes Ayres' old friends have been delighted with the way she looks these days. Agnes, who made her screen debut along with Gloria Swanson and others of that famous Essanay crowd, hasn't made a picture since the talkies, although she has been on the stage. Now she is to have her comeback in "Small Town Girl" at MGM, in which she plays a part second only to that of Janet Gaynor. And that reminds me that there is talk that Janet has vamped Robert Taylor.

Edward Arnold Wins Star Film Role

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, Jan. 24—The much discussed character of Barney Glasgow in "Come and Get It," whom Edna Ferber wished she hadn't killed off in her book, has been chosen for the screen.

I might add that he lives in the movies with the approval of the author and at the insistence of Sam Goldwyn.

Edward Arnold, who within a year has risen from the ranks of character actors to one of the screen's most important stars has been chosen for the colorful Glasgow role, the head of a lumber dynasty.

Maybe it's Margot Grahame and maybe it's Heather Angel or maybe it's neither one, but an English girl is called for in "Portrait of a Rebel," which Mark Sandrich will direct when he returns from his English vacation.

Mark you see, has just signed a new five-year contract and he is going to be head director in Pandro Berman's unit. He will also direct "Swing Time" with Katharine Hepburn. I don't know which one will come first when he returns but, at any rate, Ernst Vajda is now getting "Portrait of a Rebel," by Netta Syrett, into proper scenario form.

The argument over Charles Laughton as Mr. Chips continues until it has become another of those "who will play Romeo?" discussions. Personally I think Laughton, despite the many votes against him for the lead, will play the part. Irving Thalberg has engaged R. C. Sheriff, the English writer, to adapt "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and Laughton is his choice.

TOWN TO HONOR MRS. HEARST'S MEMORY

Whittmire, S. C., Jan. 24 (USA)—Impressive tribute to the memory of Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst, whose ancestors founded this town in the eighteenth century, will be paid here February 5 in a day-long program which will assemble patrons and close speakers.

Mrs. Hearst, mother of William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, was a co-founder with Mrs. Alice Birney, of Georgia of the Mothers' Congress out of which grew the nation-wide Parent-Teacher Association. The Whittmire unit of this association will be in charge of the memorial program.

David Whittmire Hearst, son of the publisher, will represent the Hearst family. Miss Ethel Whitmire, of San Francisco, who was a companion of Mrs. Hearst for many years, will be another featured present.

GOVERNOR TO SPEAK

A historical pageant, re-enacting the founding of this town in 1771 by Frederick and Phoebe Hapgood Whittmire, pioneers, who were the great-grandparents of Mrs. Hearst, will be a part of the program.

Governor Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina will bring greetings from this state to the visitors, and Eugene Blease, former chief justice of South Carolina, will pay a tribute to the pioneers of the Palmetto territory.

The pageant, written by Pauline Branyon of the Georgian-American, will picture the pioneer background of the Whittmire family from the time of the settlement of this town until Henry Whittmire, grandfather of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, accompanied by his brothers, Moses and Thomas, and their families, left for Missouri, where they were pioneer settlers.

The historical re-enactment will include the organization of the Mothers' Congress by Mrs. Hearst who financed the important education unit until it became self-sustaining.

2 MEMORIAL TREES

Two memorial trees will be planted on the high school campus during the afternoon. They will honor the work of Mrs. Hearst and Mrs. Alice McLellan Birney of Marietta, Ga., co-founders of the congress.

Morning and afternoon programs will be presented in the high school and luncheon will be served in the Y. W. C. A. building.

W. W. Lewis will preside at the luncheon, and J. C. Barnwell will welcome the guests. Dr. W. P. Jacobs, president of Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., will respond, and Mrs. R. G. Lake will introduce the distinguished guests.

Speakers will include Governor Johnston, Mr. Blease and Miss Whitmire.

A pilgrimage to the old Colonial Cemetery will take place in the afternoon.

A filling climax to the day's program will be a silver tea at the old Whitmire home, now occupied by Z. H. Suber and Mrs. Suber (nee Whitmire). This colonial residence was the original "Whitmire Tavern," built by Frederick Whitmire.

MUSEUM ESTABLISHED

Funds derived from this tea will be used to help equip the Whitmire Museum, which has been established in the old "store house," built by Frederick Whitmire. It was the first trading post in this section.

Presented to the Whitmire Historical Association by Mr. Suber, it already has received many valuable and historic relics.

Twins will play an important part in the pageant and in the day's program. The eldest children of the Frederick Whitmires were twins—Henry and William.

Many twins have been born to Whitmire descendants. In the home of Mr. and Mrs. Z. H. Suber there are grown twin sons, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Suber have twin babies.

David Whitmire Hearst is a twin.

It was Mrs. Lewis who sought out the records of the Whitmire family in their relation to Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, and it was her idea to honor the latter's memory on the anniversary of the founding of the Mothers' Congress, 39 years ago.

Mrs. Lewis planned the program for the day's celebration.

State P. T. A. presidents from many sections will attend the services. Mrs. Charles Center, president of the Georgia Congress, and Mrs. McLellan Smith, sister of Mrs. Alice Birney, will be among the guests.

Sally Eilers Air Guest Tonight

By N. F. T.

Light and breezy flavor fills the air while "Hollywood Hotel" has it's hour (WNAC) from coast to coast and from 9 until 10 o'clock tonight.

Sally Eilers and James Dunn with "Pinky" Tomlin tossed in for good, merry measure, have a dramatization of their new picture called "Don't Get Personal" to present.

On the very few previous occasions when Sally has sallied forth to take a featured radio role, her personality has registered with the proverbial click. Her voice vivacity fits into the network need it seems to me. Verily, should lively little Sally find the time out of her busy Hollywood screen schedule, which is doubtful, the girl would go places in radioland as rapidly as a rocket.

TENORING TREAT

More "mike" work for an already busy young lady, that's the present situation as James Melton one of the finest male soloists in broadcasting today, becomes the College Prom program star (WBZ) this evening at 8:00. Melton moves toward Hollywood for additional picture posing in February whereupon the weekly broadcast will originate from there each week.

* * *

* * *

POPULAR PAIR

Jessica Dragonette and Rob Simmons will sing the romantic duet, "Home to Our Mountains," from "Il Trovatore," as one of the highlights of tonight's concert (WEEI) at 8 o'clock. Gounod's "Ave Maria" will again be sung by Miss Dragonette as a solo.

Best Bets Tonight

9:30 p. m.—WBZ Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians with Rosemary and Priscilla Lane and Tom Waring.

A NOTE ABOUT CLARENCE DAY
(Who Died Only a Few Days Ago)

"Instead of turning his home into a hospital and himself into a hypochondriac," writes the editor of the New Yorker, in which he shone, "he turned his home into a reference library and himself into a prolific author.

"He dedicated the morning to sleep, the afternoon to waking up, the night to work. He breakfasted at 4, dined at midnight, and went to sleep at 5 in the morning—in a disorderly nest of filing cabinets, portfolios, and the tangible dregs of memorabilia.

"He could hold a pencil between his thumb and third finger and push it by flexing his shoulder muscle. His drawings—he was a remarkable artist also—were weirdly parabolical because they were a compromise between his genius and his arthritis."

LEWIS HANEY ON POLITICS

Middle Class Hope
LIES IN PRESERVING
Of Constitution

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Jan. 24—Premier Laval has resigned.

The French "left"—the Socialists of various schools—have had their way to this extent. But they are so divided among themselves, and see such enormous financial and economic difficulties in their country that they dare not assume control.

Always, it seems, the great [illegible] organized, while the extremes are organized. And always it is [illegible] to swing the government at one [illegible]

* * *

The "left" is the radical group. It stands for a revolution and for a high degree of government intervening. It is mostly made up of various brands of Socialists. It consists of people who think that the world is all wrong, and that they know exactly how to "fix" it.

The "right" is the reactionary group. It stands for letting things alone, and for no government intervention. It is "stand pat." In France it is for Fascism or for royalty.

The plain fact is that neither represents the "average man." The left stands for the "have nots" and the right for the "haves." But the average man has something, and he has a chance to get something more. While, therefore, he has little sympathy with the idea of power and wealth for the few, he does not want to lose what he has by wasting his time in marching around under a red flag or having business disrupted by wild reform schemes.

* * *

The country swung to Roosevelt because the people thought he was nearer the middle. There was much fear that he leaned too much to the left, but it was hoped that he would be influenced by the many conservative and experienced advisers whom he would naturally have drawn from his party leaders.

As time went on, it became apparent that this hope was not justified. He took up with radical schemers, Socialists, and money cranks. He has proved to be a mere politician, whose chief characteristic is a tendency to "swing left."

Now we have a condition somewhat like that in France. One by one, successive premiers who stand for the middle ground have been driven out by the "left" party. So one by one, Roosevelt has rejected and lost his sound advisers. France drifts toward radicalism. We drift toward a time when Roosevelt will be driven to "swing left"—and stay there.

* * *

The fact is that some organized minority is apt to be the moving force in a democracy. The organized minority is aggressive, vocal, and smart, and a definite block of votes. It knows what it wants. So it is with the Townsend sexagenarians, the Coughlin money changers, various farm and labor organizations, and the Socialists.

Most of them want huge government spending, which leads to insolvency and worthless currency issues, so Roosevelt is for fiat money.

* * *

What about the majority of us—the great American middle class? We have four grounds for hope:

(1) That the various radical organized minorities will fight and kill each other off.

(2) That the stand-pat element will somewhat offset the radicals.

(3) That our tried institutions, the Constitution and the Supreme Court will hold through.

(4) That our politicians will finally sense our silent desire for stable and prosperous conditions (which require sound money), and realize that when it comes to a great, national election, the majority rules.

RETAIL

SALES TAX ADVOCATED

By Associated Press

New York, Jan. 24—Despite the keen competition between various types of retail merchants, David Owens, retiring president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, regards the future with confidence

The independent retailers in particular received an encouraging word from Owens last night in an address before the association.

"I do not think the next decade or quarter of a century will witness the passing of the independent retailer from our distributive system, any more than the large department stores, mail order houses and house-to-house canvass has eliminated them in years gone by," he said.

Nevertheless, Owens told the independent merchant not to believe he had any "God given right" in the field of distribution.

The association, which concludes its convention today, also heard Mark Graves, New York state commissioner of taxation and finance, recommend a federal manufacturers sales tax.

* * *

Graves predicted citizens in the lower income brackets will have to pay higher taxes in some form in the future and said he believed the manufacturers' sales tax would be the most equitable method.

He also recommended an amendment of the federal estate tax to extend the existing credit to states to the state's field rather than to or[illegible] the first 20 per cent.

Other recommendations by Graves called for:

An amendment of the federal personal and corporate income tax laws to allow credits of 25 to 50 per cent on federal taxes for amounts paid to the states.

Withdrawal of the states from the consumption tax field, including gasoline, liquor and tobacco taxes in favor of the Federal Government.

RETURNED
Barrage of Law Suits Predicted

By Associated Press

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—One of the most complex legal tangles on record was foreseen in legal circles today as a result of the Supreme Court's order for return of $200,000,000 in impounded AAA processing taxes.

Reimbursement of the funds, it was stated, promises to touch off a barrage of lawsuits because of the conflict of interests involved.

Since the U. S. Supreme Court ordered the AAA to return processing taxes to manufacturers, federal courts have set in motion disbursement of the impounded funds.

Processors of cotton, wheat, corn and meat constitute the principal focal points on which the legal battles will be fought.

As explained in legal quarters the issue is what is to be done with the money returned as well as to whom it shall be returned.

Conflicting interests are the controversies receiving the funds, the corporations' customers (most of them retail dealers), the stockholders and the ultimate consumers.

The position of the consumers, it is stressed, presents a paradox inasmuch as in most instances they were believed to have borne the cost of the processing taxes in terms of higher prices paid for bread, meat, overalls and such staples.

Legal experts agree, nevertheless, that an equitable reimbursement to the consumer is hedged with insurmountable practical difficulties.

This leaves the corporation, the retail distributions and the corporation's shareholders as the remaining practical contestants.

On this score the skein of litigation involves the question of what disposition shall be made of the funds. Shall the corporation use it for plant improvement, retirement of bonds, to pay dividends, for wage increases or research.

BONUS

STUDIED
TRADE RISE EXPECTED

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.)

New York, Jan. 24—Business men are currently seeking to evaluate the trade consequences of the payment of the bonus.

The partial payment in 1931 offers some basis for judgment, but the two situations constitute no precise parallel. In 1931, the payment to veterans was made when business and employment were declining. Now it will doubtless be made when economic activity is expanding. In the circumstances, it is expected that the stimulant will be somewhat more effective.

Apart from the politics and social justice involved, it should be recognized that such injections of artificial purchasing power into the economic system are more analogous to the use of a hypodermic than to natural recovery.

After the initial expenditures have been made, the economic benefits tend to wear themselves out. A lasting recovery must be based with the money returned as well as to whom it shall be returned.

Conflicting interests are the controversies receiving the funds, the corporations' customers (most of them retail dealers), the stockholders and the ultimate consumers.

The position of the consumers, it is stressed, presents a paradox inasmuch as in most instances they were believed to have borne the cost of the processing taxes in terms of higher prices paid for bread, meat, overalls and such staples.

Declines to Comment On Silver

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt smiled off New York rumors of silver revaluation today with the remark to reporters that he had never heard of the purported move my the government.

Asked about persistent rumors of a new monetary move—embracing possibly gold also—by the government, the President smiled again and repeated his tip to newsmen to keep out of the market.

He first offered this tip when told that stock prices were increasing on the market on the basis of rumors of silver revaluation which would jump the vonage value of the metal above the present $1.29 an ounce.

He described the report as another one of those things.

Questioned at his press conference about a rumor of the establishment of a free gold market, he smiled again and agreed that the word free gold sounded good. But Mr. Roosevelt offered no further comment.

He was asked if there were any impending moves in international currency stabilization. The President replied that he did not think any conversations were going on along that line just now.

U. S. Pipe to Pay

United States Pipe & Foundry Co. declared a dividend of 37½ cents on the common, payable April 20 to stock of record March 31. In previous quarters it paid 12½ cents.

BOSTON & MAINE

Profit ESTIMATED For '35

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

For the fifth depression year the Boston & Maine Railroad operated at a profit if State St. estimators are to be believed.

In 1935 a surplus after charges of $200,000 kept the New England carrier in the black and earned for the road the distinction of being one of about a dozen rails to weather the depression without recourse to red ink.

On the prior preferred stock the surplus after charges amounts to earnings of 97 cents per share. While less than the $1.27 per share reported in 1934, the former period had the benefit of certain credit adjustments in operating charges in connection with PWA funds.

• • •

Investors in bank shares whose enthusiasm was considerably dampened by 1935 earnings reports should find solace and hope in Dr. David Friday's article in the current Round McNally Bankers monthly. In a nutshell, Dr. Friday says 1935 marks the turning point for banking profits. While net earnings from operations probably are not much different, losses and depreciation are greatly reduced. The trend of "recoveries" is marked and the end is not far distant when banks may find that the necessary write-offs of losses will be exceeded by profits and recoveries on securities. Another important factor noted by Dr. Friday is that the payment of interest on deposits has been readjusted to match the rates prevailing in the money market and the return investments yield.

• • •

Comment: With the support of such an astute observer as Dr. Friday it is easy to suggest that investors keep careful watch for weak spells in the bank stock department in order to augment present holdings . . . It is with considerable satisfaction we hear rumors to the effect Douglas Aircraft will not be forced to seek new money . . . for plant expansion to handle the huge volume of orders on hand . . . Many of the other leading units will . . . Douglas, long an persistent recommended as investment medium in this column, is financing out of capital funds, but pay conserve cash to the extent of not taking dividend action at the coming meeting.

• • •

Wednesday of last week we wrote here that the rails with a definite objective level of 100 on the Dow-Jones index might achieve their peak as industrials were said under cover of the strength. The pattern traced by the market so far this week comes dangerously close to confirming that idea. It would be far more satisfactory from our viewpoint if industrials filled through to a new peak. For then the implication of a good market through the balance of winter would be extremely strong. And carry with it the elimination of expanding business and trade well into the spring months.

• • •

Notebook: Inflation is in the air once again . . . All sorts of wild rumors are to be heard for the asking . . . More devaluation, a free gold market and world currency stabilization on a basis of 841 per ounce of gold . . . All are with us once more . . . Gold shares are better but we wonder if the average investor is unable to inflation talk—is not justified by both current earnings and dividends . . . In any event the smart thing to do is to play the market for its own sake and disregard the excitement-making rumors . . . Reasonably instituted position in stocks is too valuable an asset to be disturbed by hysteria.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

The Street-Cleaner and the Countess

The Broadway "White Wing" Who Turned Hero for a Day

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, I don't suppose there's a club in the world that boasts the variety of members that this old Adventurers' Club of ours does. Young and old, rich and poor, social registerites and street cleaners! What do we care. We don't ask you who you are. We ask you what you have done.

Milady Adventure is as democratic as she is interesting and she bars no one from the gutter to the palace. A newsboy with a thrill in his story is as welcome as a countess.

And, by the way, speaking of countesses reminds me of our Fellow Adventurer today, Countess Hazel Howard-Kirby de Hollyngworthe of Jackson Heights, L. I.

Countess Hazel not only has a swell sounding title, but can now write herself a Distinguished Member of the Adventurers' Club! The Countess—Hazel to us now—has had her share of adventure.

She served as a nurse in the World War—a tougher job, incidentally, than it sounds. Many of us think of a war nurse as a girl who bandaged some soldier's wounded forehead and marries him after the war.

But that's the Hollywood version of a war nurse. As a matter of fact the great majority of wounds are in the body and it's no joke caring for a poor devil with his stomach shot away or his body frightfully burned by mustard gas.

No time for romance then. Just plain, hard, dirty work and a cussing out if you are too fastidious.

Hazel went through all that and she fought her way out of a den of rattlesnakes in the Texas Panhandle, too. But where do you suppose she had her most thrilling adventure?

It happened in 1929 at 33rd st. and Broadway, where the traffic is enough to frighten the staunchest heart. Hazel was tripping daintily across the street in her French high heel shoes. Doubtless there were many more heels on the street that day, but our story is concerned with Hazel's heel.

The signal was with Hazel as she stepped across a manhole in the middle of the street, but the man-hole was against her. An air hole in the grating grabbed hold of her high heel and held on. Hazel tried to step along lively, as we New Yorkers have to do, but she couldn't lift her foot. She looked down at the pretty shoe that had cost her plenty and tried to pry it loose without hurting the shine.

But it was no go. The countess was as much a prisoner as if she had been confined in one of her noble ancestor's own dungeons.

Meanwhile the traffic signal changed—as they always do when you don't want them to—and an avalanche of mechanical contrivances bore down on our trapped countess. Taxis missed her by a hair and chauffeurs spoke to her as no person with a title should be spoken to.

But still the little French heel held firm as the French army at Verdun. "She shall not pass," the heel seemed to be saying, just as its makers had said of the charging Germans years before.

Hazel was nonplussed, to say the least. Taxis in the front of her; taxis in the back of her; taxis to the side of her—volleyed and thundered and into that Valley of Death rode—not the six hundred, but twelve hundred pounds of plunging draft horses. The horses were attached to a heavy delivery wagon and those old-fashioned things can't avoid a person the way a modern taxi can—if it wants to!

The horses came straight for Hazel! At last, fear for her dainty shoe left her, and in its place came an actual fear for her dainty life. She dragged at the shoe and screamed at the top top of her voice. The driver sawed at the horses' bits. The heavy horses reared on their haunches and sprayed the countess with flecks of foam. She felt their hot breath at the nape of her boyish bob!

In a split second those pounding hoofs would descend with twelve hundred pounds of horse flesh behind them on Hazel's one hundred pounds of nonsense!

Hazel says her thoughts reviewed her past adventures and it sure seemed tough to be snuffed out in this prosaic way! Just another traffic accident, the papers would say, and then give the score of the ball game!

And now, boys and girls, play that soft music. Our hero enters the scene. He is standing nonchalantly in the gutter in his white uniform, leaning gracefully on his long brush. His ears detect a note of alarm rising high above the sirens of his enemies the taxi drivers. His quick eye—trained to detect the slightest spot on the street—takes in the situation at a glance.

A lady in distress! Needs must rescue her!

The White Wing—for such our hero is—tosses his brush aside and leaps into the fray. The countess feels a strong arm about her. A knight errant has come to her aid. In the middle ages he might have been called the "White Knight," she mused. The horses' hoofs still poise in mid-air as the startled driver pulls them back!

The terror-stricken countess feels herself jerked unceremoniously in the air. There is a snap as the strap of her imprisoned slipper breaks. And down come the heavy hoofs of the plunging draft horses right on top of—her empty slipper!

Laugh if you like—now that it's over. But it was a darn ticklish situation and a real heroic act on the part of that unknown White Wing. I wish I knew his name. But as usual in unselfish acts like this he slipped away unnoticed as some passers-by went to the aid of the distracted girl.

I'm going to take my life in my hands now and cross the street for a cup of coffee, but I'll come back again—if I'm lucky—and put the finishing touches on a swell story which I am printing and paying for tomorrow at the usual rates.

Read the simple conditions at the top of the page and send me in YOUR greatest thrill. It may hit the top and win that $100.00 prize that the club awards for the best thrill of the month.

IN ANY CASE—SEE YOU TOMORROW,

Louis Only Modern Athlete With Millionaire Prospects

THE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE which is snooping into the wealth of its citizens, reveals no millionaire athletes on the list. And unless Joe Louis, the Negro scrapper, mounts that pinnacle at some later time, it is unlikely that the sport business will produce any more millionaires, of which, in my memory, there were only three.

AUSTEN LAKE

Two were fist fighters, Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey, and one a ball player, Babe Ruth, who were products of the great money fever when nobodies from nowhere were yawning down opportunities to earn more in an hour of restrained ring action than an honest toiler could make in a life of hard labor.

Ty Cobb was also reckoned to have stored up a million at the time when his career was wobbling to a close with the Philadelphia Athletics. But his wealth was mainly the result of shrewd stock investment on the tips of doornob and pop-bottle magnates, who liked to boast his acquaintance. So that his baseball earnings, though pretty robust in his declining years, were merely a base for his board-room operations.

By remaining active long after their physical prime, Ruth and Dempsey sweated their creaking frames to the limit. But Tunney married a steel heiress and wisely turned his horde over to professional trustees so that, though his stake was melted somewhat by the market collapse, he still has a nest-egg which enables him to live with American royalty and to resist temptations to return to the ring and pick up some soft money for taking a sock on the whiskers.

Joe Has Plenty of Horrible Examples

THE MILLIONAIRE ATHLETES were monuments to the day when the people crowded the turnstiles and paid $55 for ringside chairs a full Arkansas hog-shout away from the ring. Ruth, without counting his by-products, was drawing more for six months of two-hour-a-day play than the President of the country was getting for full time.

The tourist mob was stamping down to the Florida settlements searching for goofier things to do. And the little mud-puddle towns of the South were having delusions of grandeur and offering large cash inducements for the privilege of entertaining the ball clubs through March training.

Tunney's, Dempsey's and Ruth's millions, which are millions no longer, were born of this frenzy.

Now, in saner times, Louis, as a potential millionaire, can benefit by the spendthrift example of an army of derelicts, who made it and spent it on every form of frivolity. His first $100,000 went into buying himself a little pension that will give him $100 a week for life.

He has a quarter-million in trust funds, fresh cash and real estate, and may, at his present rate of industry and with a self-control unknown to earlier Negro fighters, hit his goal.

Babe Suffers Along on $15,000

RUTH AT THE MOMENT is living frugally on a paltry $15,000 a year, which oozes from an untouchable insurance trust. So that the luxuries of the old day, like the cords of black $1 cigars,

COUNT Will Test DANNO

ROYAL RIGHT SOPORIFIC

By Jack Conway

Can Dan O'Mahony take it?

I once got a peek at Strangler Lewis following a bout with Danno. The Strangler carried a wound over his left eye, a cut on his cheek, while one of his lower teeth had been punched through his lip.

"Somebody should put a stop to O'Mahoney's punching tactics," Lewis confided to me. "I don't like to protest because people might think I was squawking, but it isn't fair the way Danno belts his opponents around. He gave me more punishment than I received in 25 average bouts."

Nobody has got a good poke at Danno. So the fans don't know whether the Irishman can take it. In this respect he is rated much like Joe Louis.

The "Brown Bomber" certainly can give it, but can he take it? Schmeling or Braddock may give the answer.

NEXT FRIDAY

Count Casmir Polowski, Polish strong man, will find out whether Danno can take it when he clashes with the champion at the Garden next Friday night at a show to be promoted by the New England Sled Dog Club, Inc.

The Count is the "bad man" of the wrestling wars. He has lost only one bout in a year, and that by disqualification to Nick Lutze.

If Polowski decides to rough things up with Danno, you will find out very quickly if Danno can take it. The Count packs a Joe Louis thump in each hand.

WALTER REMINGTON WILLIAM FREDERICK RALPH SPENCER

"WHY DON'T you get a pair of clamp skates?" Ralph Spencer of Newton taunts Walter Remington of Brighton as the latter makes ready for a practice spin at the Arena in preparation for the mammoth Silver Skates Derby at Franklin Field Sunday. William Frederick of Everett is the third member. All are members of the Olympic Skating Club, and all will participate in the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser carnival.

Thunberg's Mark Jaffee's Goal

By Walter Kiley

Intent on cracking the world half-mile speed skating record set by Finland's great Clas Thunberg at Lake Placid in 1926, Irving Jaffee, Silver Skates Derby director and world and Olympic champion and record holder, will celebrate his first New England skating appearance in a special race against time on Derby Day at Franklin Field, Sunday.

Jaffee has performed his amazing feats before crowned heads of Europe and the United States, in every great ice arena of the world's winter playgrounds.

The Prince of Wales, newly crowned King Edward VIII of Great Britain, was a spectator as Jaffee shot to fame in the 1928 Olympics at Lake Placid.

King Haakon VII of Norway, ex-President Paul Von Hindenburg of Germany, Prime Minister Bennett of Canada, the King of Denmark and President Franklin D. Roosevelt of United States, then governor of New York state, were interested enthusiasts as Jaffee gained renown at Oslo, Norway; Davos and St. Moritz, Switzerland, Paris, France; Stockholm, Sweden; Vienna, Austria, Helingfors, Finland, Banff, Montreal, Quebec and Toronto in Canada; Lake Placid, Newburgh, Madison Square Garden and other famous spots in this country.

But never before has he shown his amazing skill with the lightning steel runners in New England.

Records from the one mile to the 25 miles have been strewn like leaves in a strong wind by this speed skating marvel, who dreams of climaxing this great Silver Skates Derby in smashing, dramatic fashion.

The great Thunberg's half-mile record of 1-13 1-5 seconds has stood up against time. It is Jaffee's greatest ambition to split it asunder before he retires. Just as he did at Oslo, Norway, home of the incomparable Sonja Henie, when he established the present world mile record of two minutes 30 2-5 seconds, beating Thunberg's previous mark by almost eight seconds.

It was this feat, averaging 28 miles per hour, which led to "Believe-it-or-not" Ripley labelling Jaffee "World's Fastest Human."

It was an even more impressive performance than the cinder path record of 9 2-5 seconds set by Frank Wykoff over the 100 yards. This far shorter distance was negotiated at a speed approximating 24 miles per hour.

Jaffee's record attempt is just one more feature of a thrill packed day which starting at 10 A. M. endures through until late afternoon.

Cold weather has turned out to be a blessing for Silver Skate Derbyists.

Franklin Field ice, thanks to the careful ministrations of Park Commissioner William P. Long, City Engineer John Murphy, Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin and their conscientious assistants, is one great sheen of ice, 12 inches thick, ready and waiting for the hundreds of competitive hosts and the thousands of spectators.

Program in American Tomorrow

All Silver Skates Derby entries, numbers, heats and a full program of times, officials, features, specialties and data pertaining to the great outdoor skating carnival to be held at Franklin Field on Sunday, will be published in all editions of tomorrow's Boston Evening American and in Sunday's Advertiser as well.

Both participants and spectators are advised to obtain copies in advance. The racing and feature numbers will be far more interesting with this reliable guide.

BE SURE to have copies beforehand.

Boston Regatta In August

New York, Jan. 24—A schedule of 26 regattas has been approved by the racing committee of the American Power Boat Association for 1930.

The Lipton Cup race and the President's Cup regatta, both of the season, were set for Lake George, N. Y., July 25, and for Washington, D. C., Sept. 15 to 20. The last event for the outboard racers, the Albany-New York Marathon, will be held May 10. Other races scheduled:

McAvoy Gets Title Go

15,000 See U. S. Tie in Britain

Brighton, England, Jan. 24—The United States Olympic hockey team came from behind to gain a 4 to 4 tie with a team of resident Canadians here.

The United States players were handicapped by a penalty to Goalie Tom Moone in the second period.

The Olympics got their combinations working effectively in the final frame after Rees' goal made the count 6-2. Frank Shaughnessy tallied for the second time, Jack Garrison added a goal, and Frank Spain netted two more to tie the score.

Mr. Boston Ideal Conditions For Derby

—By Jack Conway—

PARK Commissioner William Long informs me that the skating surface at Franklin Field will be perfect for the great Silver Skates Derby of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser which will be held on Sunday.

Mr. Boston

Irving Jaffee, director of the Derby, has arranged for three racing courses with the aid of the engineers of the park department.

Park Commissioner Long is very proud of Franklin Field. He says it is the finest place in the world for a skating derby as it is ideal for racing, and also has accommodations for thousands of spectators.

It is expected that between 40,000 and 50,000 persons will witness the Silver Skates Derby. The trials will be held Sunday morning, the finals in the afternoon.

It is the show of shows from a skating viewpoint and will surpass any Silver Skates Derby held in the past in any part of the country.

The large and splendid entry list has been made possible through the co-operation of the New England Skating Association. It did not require any of the competitors to pay the usual entry fees.

There is ample parking areas for those who motor to Franklin Field, while the street cars go almost to the starting point of the races.

• • •

POLICE Commissioner Eugene McSweeney and Fire Commissioner Edward McLaughlin will furnish special details.

Park Commissioner Long will have 75 playground instructors on hand to assist Irving Jaffee and his aids in conducting the races.

Everything is FREE!

Even the weather man has helped. The present cold wave has eliminated all worries about ice. Early in the month it didn't look as if Boston was going to have much skating this winter.

Then came the present cold wave, and those persons in charge of the Silver Skates Derby as well as the 600 competitors are jubilant.

I'll be at Franklin Field on Sunday to see the sport and also to root for some new records. I'll be seeing you there.

JACK SHARKEY

I DROPPED in at Buckley's gym to see Jack Sharkey in his first day of boxing for his ten-round bout with Tony Shucco, which will be staged by the Goodwin A. C. at the Garden on February 7.

Sharkey boxed with Eddie Gates, Ray Mondello, the boxing artist, Al Mennino and "Red" O'Reilly. Gates gave Sharkey a rugged workout, and enabled the former champion to open up with both hands.

Sharkey used Mondello, a bantamweight, and Mendino, a light weight, to build up speed. Sharkey figures he will require all of his speed when he opposes Shucco.

Sharkey also skipped rope and did some floor exercises. In all he worked 11 rounds. He weighed 200 pounds when he completed his training, and should be at 196 pounds when he faces Shucco.

"Rip" Valenti of the Goodwin Club watched Sharkey in action, and declared the former champion looks as if he is already in fine condition. Valenti declared interest in the show is running high.

"Our advance sale is already as large as it usually is for a big show three days before the bout," said Valenti.

"I originally thought Sharkey and Shucco would draw a gate of $20,000. The bout will be bigger than I thought it would, and the gate will easily hit $25,000.

"Everyone knows Shucco will give Sharkey a fight. Tony in my opinion won from Al McCoy, and he is confident he will outscore Sharkey."

• • •

Bobby Allen, welterweight champion of Nova Scotia, watched Sharkey in action. Allen has wed three bouts since coming to the United States and says he will remain here for the balance of this year. Allen scales 142 pounds, is a good boxer and a sharp puncher.

Dave Castillioux, Barney Fox's new boxer, also worked at Buckley's. Barney says Dave is going places.

Speed Aces Here Sunday In Silver Skates Derby

40,000 TO SEE CHAMPIONS IN ACTION

By WALTER KILEY

Sunday brings the long-awaited Silver Skates Derby.

Sabbath roads lead to Franklin Field, Dorchester's spacious skating playground, where the most ambitious ice pageant ever produced in New England will thrill a record breaking gallery of more than 40,000 anticipated spectators.

From distant outposts of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut, from the furthermost hamlets of Massachusetts as well as neighboring Boston communities, come a solid phalanx of potential New England Silver Skate champions, more than 500 strong.

Young Flash

It will be a day of speed skating by Champions Muriel Wilson, leader of the feminine contingent, and Clifford Farrington, men's title-holder, all the way down the scale to little five-year-old Bobby Murphy, tiny mite, who boasts amazing skating talents.

Speed races will be dressed in a frame of fancy performances, pirouetting and feature solos and pairs by Misses Polly Blodgett, Nan Thrower and Olivia Stone, Roger Turner and Bernard Fox, members of the Skating Club of Boston, whose difficult roles have been undertaken in the famous rinks of the nation.

Competitors in training for the great event for the past six weeks, and their fancy skating brethren as well, look to the Silver Skates Derby as the birth of a new era in New England skating, one which will eventually result in these states taking their rightful place in Olympic and world prominence.

Seeks Record

Jaffee, Silver Skates Derby director, world and Olympic speed skating champion, will match his lightning steels against the record of 1 minute 15 1-5 seconds set by Finland's great Clas Thunberg at Lake Placid on February 13, 1926.

It was Jaffee who was recently labeled by "Believe-It-or-Not" Ripley, the "World's Fastest Human" after setting a new world mile record of 2 minutes 30 2-5 seconds at Oslo, Norway, home of Sonja Henie.

Muriel Wilson, pretty Darien, Connecticut, speedster, heads the long list of women entries in the great Silver Skates Derby championships at Franklin Field on Sunday. Miss Wilson, recently successfully defended her New England championship title. She was runner-up to Kit Klein, now in Berlin as a member of the United States Olympic team, in the Olympic tryouts at Newburgh, New York.

GIRL SKATER TOPS ENTRANTS IN FRANKLIN FIELD RACES

Ed Brandt

Signs Dodger Contract

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Ed Brandt, veteran left-hander obtained from the Boston Braves a few weeks ago, returned his signed contract to the Brooklyn Dodgers today.

Brandt and Randy Moore came to the Dodgers in a big trade which sent Al Lopez, Tony Cuccinello, Bobby Reis and Ray Benge to Boston.

U. S. Skaters Pass Up Championship

Berlin, Jan. 24 (AP)—The American Olympic skaters have decided to forego the European skating championships which begin today.

The first contingent of Americans has not yet reached Berlin and has decided not to compete because of insufficient time for practice since arriving in Europe.

The group includes Maribel Y. Vinson and Georgs Hill of Boston, and Robin Lee and Eric Reiter of Minneapolis.

CRONIN, Dahlgren FRIENDS

BAT BOYS PLENTIFUL

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Jimmy McLarnin will fight once more before hanging up the mittens for keeps . . . Tony Canzoneri then will take over the role as Barney Ross' chief worry.

Since January 1 the Braves have averaged 100 anticipated daily for the batboy job.

Terry Can't Take It

Bill Terry burned up his fellow Cotton State League magnates by not showing up at a meeting he himself called . . . The indignant mags blasted Bill with a hot resolution that "it is the sense of this meeting that Bill Terry is guilty of gross discourtesy to those who were considerate enough to comply with his request to meet him here." . . . Bill says he got out of bed at 6:30 a. m. to go to Greenwood, but decided the weather was too rough.

Southern scouts say Tulane was considering trying to lure Ray Morris away from Vanderbilt but will not make an offer now that Dan McGugin is dead . . . It would be a body blow to Vandy to lose both McGugin and Morrison in one year.

Former President John Heydler of the National League is vacationing in Mexico City and "Heisler" fans down there are making his visit a gala event . . . Jack Vance, Northwestern backfield coach, spent December in 20-degrees-below weather at International Falls, Minn., and now is deep sea fishing under a tropical sun at Miami.

Larowe O. K.

Ford Frick, president of the National League, is thinking of asking the government to issue a commemorative stamp in 1939 to celebrate the 100th anniversary of baseball . . . A year ago they told Johnny Larowe, Virginia boxing coach, he'd never walk again . . . Now he's up and—frequently does—lick any man on his squad.

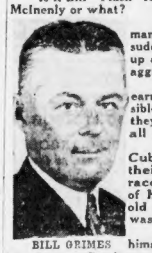
Frozen FactS

Cubs Unbeatable With Hollett in Lineup | Trouble Brewing In Toronto Ranks

By BILL GRIMES

What's come over those Cubs? Is it Bill "Flash" Howlett, Ray Getliffe, Captain Bert McInenly or what?



BILL GRIMES

After stalling around like so many snow shovelers, the Cubs have suddenly been transformed into an up and coming, alert and determined aggregation of puck chasers.

In their first 24 games, the Cubs earned only ten points out of a possible 48. In their last three games, they have made a clean sweep, taking all six points.

I've contended all season that the Cubs were by no means as bad as their position in the Can-Am League race indicated. There's been plenty of high class talent available but the old inspiration was lacking. The team was licked before it went on the ice.

Even more disheartening was the fact that the team morale ebbed with each defeat until the players were about ready to concede that the cards were stacked against them.

• • •

Capacity Crowd Due At Garden Sunday

Then Hollett put in an appearance, accompanied by as much fanfare as would have been tendered Howie Morenz, had the great N. H. L. star joined the Bruins a decade ago.

Now it may have been only a coincidence, but just as soon as Hollett donned a Cubs' uniform, the team started to go places, until now it has scored successive victories over Providence, Philadelphia and New Haven by amassing a total of 19 goals.

Because of the Cub spurt, there'll be a near capacity crowd at the Garden Sunday night for the Philadelphia Ramblers' game and the gathering will be behind the Cubs to the last man.

J Lucien Garneau, president and owner of the Springfield Indians, went for $600 for the failure of the West Springfield police to protect Normie Shay, the Can-Am referee, who was assaulted a week ago.

The Canadian-American League board of governors voted to sustain President Ross' verdict in the Springfield case, and also agreed that Doug Brennan should be suspended indefinitely.

Garneau wrote out a check for $600 and turned it over to President Ross. There must be plenty of money in promoting minor league hockey this season for one owner to go for that amount of money.

Use Acid

To Condition Bobsled Run

Garmisch-Partenkirchen (AP)—Even if a warm south wind should come along to endanger the condition of the Olympic bobsled run, it will be kept in perfect condition for the winter games by a new kind of carbonic acid.

Recent tests with the new acid, which is produced in a stiff form, proved that the layout could stand 100 runs daily without deteriorating its condition, despite a temperature far above the freezing point.

BASEBALL MOVIE SHOWN TONIGHT

COLLINS, SCHACHT ATTEND

By Joe Cashman

Eddie Collins, Al Schacht and Umpire George Moriarty will be present to say a few words at the Boston Park Department Leagues' showing of the American League movie "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," at the J. J. Williams Auditorium, West Brookline street, this evening.

Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins definitely decided during their mid-week conference in New York to take their Piedmont League franchise out of Charlotte, N. C. Rocky Mount, N. C., will get the club if the city fathers down there approve a bond issue for the construction of a ball park.

The Boston Nationals roster is in the printer's hand. Statistics on Pitchers Sharkey Eiland and Jim Chaplin, newcomers from Nashville, arrived in time to be included in the list.

No less than ten New England royal rooters will make the southern trip with the Red Sox.

Contributions include Dr. William Ross, Dr. Wilbur Hughes, Joe Conway, Joe Geary, John Igos and John Dooley of Boston; Dr. James Nelligan of Pittsburgh, Dr. Joseph Sullivan of Dalton, George Murphy of Lewiston, Me., and Arthur Murphy of Milton.

Bill McCalley, Athletics' groundkeeper, is on his way to Fort Myer, Fla., after spending several days at Sarasota working on the Red Sox training diamond. He reports everything in tip top shape for the arrival of the Connies.

Wilshere will report at Fort Myers, Fla., for spring training March 2. He won 10 and lost 10 for the Athletics last year.

Athletic's Pitcher Graduates Monday

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 24—Vernon (Whitey) Wilshere of Skaneateles, N. Y., Athletics pitcher, will be graduated from Indiana University Monday.

Wilshere will report at Fort Myers, Fla., for spring training March 2. He won 10 and lost 10 for the Athletics last year.

SCHOOL Sextets Clash AT ARENA

Hockey players of the Greater Boston Interscholastic League will have their "innings" tonight at the Boston Arena when the eight clubs clash in the first four evening games of the season. The first game will start at 8 o'clock.

The Interscholastic League has been playing its games at the Garden on Saturday afternoons, but due to the fact that there will be no ice at the Garden tomorrow, owing to the Northeastern Interscholastic track meet, the league matches will be played at the Arena tonight.

Stoneham is still out in front with six wins and no defeats and is certain of a playoff position. Tonight it meets Medford.

The veteran Cliff Thompson and the new star, Donny Orr, will be watched closely.

The "game of the night" should be Melrose and Arlington. Coach Poole's boys are in second place with 10 points and the Arlington team is third with nine.

In the Belmont-Rindge clash, Belmont has a chance to make it a tie for seventh position in the league standing if it can win.

$100,000 in 1936, Ross' Goal

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 24—Barney Ross plans to do a Joe Louis this year and fight just as often as possible.

Ross wants to earn $100,000 and then retire.

"The faster they dig up opponents for me, the better I'll like it," said the welterweight champion.

He is hoping Jimmy McLarnin will come back for another shot at the title because McLarnin is the best drawing card in the field.

the bales of imported Regent Street shirts, and the hampers of custom-made clothes, are whittled down to what, for Babe, is a squalid form of living.

Babe frittered away more than a million of his early profits before he married the manager, who is the present Mrs. Ruth, and took moral stock and tap-water for his drink.

But if he thinks back at all, he must think of the gay day when he gave away an expensive motor car because it quit suddenly on a rural road. Or how, in his vast contempt for the riches which tumbled down from every side, he forgot to bank his dividend checks and let them wear out against his hard money and keys.

Babe, even in the limbo of public forgetfulness, still endorses a breakfast food. His name appears in sundry small articles that kick back royalties. But the torrent of money that used to pour in with every mail has dwindled to a mere trickle, and his income is rationed below his tastes.

Louis, being off the privileged skin-shade, draws no perquisites from boosting articles that he does not use or by signing his name to newspaper and magazine stories that he does not write. His income comes 100 per cent from his ring battles.

• • •

The Pathetic Roll-Call

NOW, AS A RESTAURANT PROPRIETOR in the incandescent regions oft Times Square, Dempsey's present earnings are listed in the lower twenty-thousands, some of which come from incidental fees as referee and from that part of his ring savings which were not lost in the big ruin.

Of the regiment of athletes who have laid their hands to between $100,000 and half a million, and who had more at one time than the average man ever expects to accumulate, Benny Leonard, Rogers Hornsby, Jess Willard, Georges Carpentier, Tommy Loughran, Jimmy Maloney, Mickey Walker and Reggie McNamara are only a few who wound up disillusioned, broke, and forced to make pathetic attempts to climb the ladder.

Of all these self-made martyrs, the case of Mickey Walker is most touching. He made a half a million, married frequently, and paid out his fortune in alimony. And though he quit the ring emphatically a few years ago, he is back again, sick part of the time, trying to fight his way through the tumble-down clubs and taking pastings from crude, young barroom pugs.

• • •

Ruth Last of His Line

NO MAN, OF COURSE, can predict that another money boom and universal contempt for money will not roar again in our time, or that fighters will not again yawn down $100,000 as mere promotional teasers. The public memory for disaster is short, and there is a modest prizering craze going on just now, with the prospect of a couple of million dollar fights next summer when the people will again pay large sums for seats a full Henley distance from the ring.

There may be other millionaire glove fighters, like Dempsey and Tunney. The sport is that sort. But there will never be another Babe Ruth to put home runs in mass production and couple his talent with a mischievous, small-boy charm that made him nothing less than first in the hearts of his countrymen.

Stewart Unbeaten In College Racing

By Murray Kramer

Runners may not have the blood strain of thoroughbreds but they are more consistent. For that reason, the feature performers are virtual cinches to win their favorite events at the Boston Garden tomorrow night, where the Prout Memorial games will be conducted.

Horse lovers can dwell for hours on the blood strain of a particular gelding or filly, but, when a race gets under way, one never knows what's going to happen.

Trackmen, on the other hand, generally run true to form. Of course, there is an occasional upset when one performer is not right or some youngster has his big moment, but, on the whole, the pari-mutuels will never invade the Garden for a track meet.

Oscar Hedlund, M. I. T.; Win Marling, Boston University; Jack Ryder, Boston College, and Eddie Parsons, Northeastern, made up the quartet.

In five events they were unanimous but in the Prout 600, Win Marling likes Herman Stewart, the Amherst crack middle distance star, who has never been defeated in competition. The other three coaches favor Milton Sandler.

Glenn Cunningham is naturally top choice in the mile, Chuck Hornbostel in the 1000. Ray McLaughlin in the high hurdles, Eulace Peacock in the dash, and Threadgill in the high jump.

Sandler is a great 600 yarder but he is not consistent. Hoffman or Steward is likely to upset him.

Doug Raymond of Boston University beat Sandler last year, but unfortunately, Doug is down with a bad cold and has been forced to withdraw from the event.

Tootell's Three Proteges Olympic Timber

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Fred Tootell, who won the Olympic hammer throw in 1928, is predicting that three of his pupils at Rhode Island State will represent the United States in the Olympic weight events at Berlin next summer.

In forwarding the entries of Henry Dreyer, a Rhode Island alumnus, and two undergraduates, Irving Folwartshny and Bill Rowe, for the 35-pound weight throw at the National A. A. U. indoor championships February 22, Tootell declared he thought all three would make the Olympic team as hammer-throwers and that all three would break the indoor 35-pound weight throw mark. Dreyer will wear the colors of the New York A. C. in defending the title.

Empty Bottle for $3500 Feature

By Dave Wilson
Selections made for fast track.
BEST BET—SCOTCH GOLD.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 24—Empty Bottle, E. B. Carpenter's aptly named Jock and Bit o'Regret colt, is fancied to romp off with major honors in the $3500 added Hialeah Stakes, six furlongs feature on a splendid week-end card of seven races here tomorrow.

String along with Scotch Gold for a best bet. Goes in the six furlongs of the third stanza and needs only an even shake in racing luck in order to score.

FIRST—THRUSTER, GANNY'S TRADE, R. PINCHOT

THRUSTER, dropping down from a good effort in better company, needs only intelligent handling in order to grace the winner's circle. GRANNY'S TRADE, fast and faint-hearted, figures to hang on long enough to save the place award from the fast-working R. PINCHOT. The latter comes highly recommended by the clockers.

SECOND—MAEDIC, SHEATHE, GLEAMING

MAEDIC turned in a first-rate effort behind Happy Road and other fleet juveniles in a maiden start only a few days back. The Maemere colorbearer figures to stand a world of beating with a bit of improvement. SHEATHE, highly regarded son of Sickle and Mirabelle, has trained in a highly satisfactory manner and should be there or thereabouts at the finish. GLEAMING will likely show marked improvement.

THIRD—SCOTCH GOLD, NAUGHTY, BRIGHT HAVEN

SCOTCH GOLD is picking up five additional pounds, but that should not stop him from earning brackets. The gray gelding pulled up to a similar field in a previous outing. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by NAUGHTY. The latter is tossed in under a feather of 93 pounds. BRIGHT HAVEN gets next best.

FOURTH—EMPTY BOTTLE, DNIEPER, CROSSBOW 2nd

EMPTY BOTTLE will be coming up fit and ready to run for a king's ransom. I look for him to make every pole a winning one. DNIEPER, away since last summer, has trained brilliantly and figures to run a crackerjack race first crack out of the box. CROSSBOW 2nd can take it all.

FIFTH—MANTAGNA, WHOPPER, HIGH GLEE

MANTAGNA and WHOPPER figure pretty much alike under the weight arrangements, but I'm going to tempt fate by rating them as named. The former drubbed Lynx Eye and other fleet thoroughbreds out of the mile chute last time and is picking up only five pounds. WHOPPER, under top-heavy impost of 128, is picking up six pounds off his Inaugural victory. HIGH GLEE suffered from lack of racing room in the Inaugural and never had a chance to show her true form. She can take all.

SIXTH—RESERVIST, WHIPPER CRACKER, RED ROAMER

RESERVIST showed to advantage while receiving tighteners in slightly better company only a few days back. Previous form shows that he can handle a field of this sort. WHIPPER CRACKER, never better than now, figures to offer the sternest sort of contention. RED ROAMER is a hard one to guess, but he is entitled to high figures on bets races.

SEVENTH—HOMEWORK, CAPT. JERRY, SILENCE 3D

HOMEWORK Keomes so highly recommended by stable connections that just can't pass him up in searching for the winner. Use your own judgment. CAPT JERRY is the solid horse on all form. SILENCE 3d figures to be along in time to save the minor award.

Discovery To Remain On Turf

By Associated Press

Reports that Alfred G. Vanderbilt's 1935 handicap champion, Discovery, would be retired to the stud after the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap on Washington's Birthday, met a denial today from J. T. (Bud) Stotler, the racer's trainer.

"Mr. Vanderbilt has no idea of retiring the horse," Stotler said. "It is altogether probable that he will want to give Discovery a rest if the colt should finish in the money in the big handicap. But and Mr. Vanderbilt feels just as I do—Discovery is not through with racing after the season. He has many good races ahead."

Jockey Jimmy Lynch, who was painfully injured in a spill at Hialeah Park Saturday, will be on the sidelines for six or seven weeks, according to Agent Jennings Smallwood. Lynch suffered a broken collar bone, a fractured right thumb and bruises about the face and head.

BOWLING

Queen at Top OF FORM

By Ed Cogswell

Women bowlers take notice; men also!

Going into active training for the coming women's team matches and tournaments Florence "Bobby" Anderson is slashing the candlepins into the gutters with reckless abandon.

Not in the years that Miss Anderson has been foremost in feminine bowling circles has she been hitting the pins with the accuracy she has displayed this season.

This fact was amply attested through rapping a three-string total of 379, with a high string of 136—remarkable bowling for a member of the gentle sex, and a figure few men are capable of beating.

In the 160 string, Miss Anderson had seven strikes or spares in the 10 boxes. The remarkable performance was watched by an audience that repeatedly burst into hearty applause when the little woman connected for a difficult spare.

The two-man, ten-string matches between Andrews and Swan (Eagle alleys) and Angelo and F. Chimenillo (Jamaica Plain) have kept the fans on edge.

Twice these teams have met. In each instance, so close were the contests that the winners could not be determined till after the final boxes had been rolled.

What is so rare as a 400 score in a league match?

Dooley, anchor for the Bowling Club in the Corporation League, at Shanley's alleys, topped that mark by one pin in the match against Gillette, his individual strings being 139, 159 and 103.

Games Wanted

The Charlesbank club of the West End house would like to arrange basketball games with fast amateur teams in the state. For information, call George Brenner at Laf. 9436; or write to the West End house, Blossom street, Boston.

N. U. Has Dozen in K. C. Games

Ed Parsons and Joe Zeller, N. U. track mentors, announced today that they will enter a twelve-man team in the Casey games tomorrow night at the Garden.

Jim Sander

The little squad will be comprised of six varsity men and six freshmen.

The quartet will be composed of Greg Fawcett of Lowell, Al Freeman of Newton, Dick Underwood of Everett, and Maurice Katz of Boston Trade.

Bob Kiley, who is convalescing after an illness, is an original member of the foursome, but Underwood will run in his place.

Captain Jim Sandler and Dany Miles will be the varsity and freshman entries in the high jump. Art Johnston will run the two mile under varsity colors, with Zamparelli doing the same for the freshmen. Hakanson and Henderson will also run in the hurdles.

GOMEZ HURT Arm in Sling

Gomez slipped and came up with his salary highly scratched and bruised. The arm, though still sore, was reported improved today.

BUN COOK May Be Out FOR SEASON

The team that started off the season with high hopes and managed to stage a stiff battle for first place in the American division during the early part of the season, has lost its last three games and dropped into third place, only two points ahead of the cellar-dwelling Bruins.

Not only that but time has caught up with the Cook brothers, Boucher front line, the greatest scoring combination in the history of the game, and now illness has reared its ugly head to further plague Manager Lester Patrick.

Dolefully, the gray-haired Patrick said last night that he feared Bun Cook would not be able to play again this season. Bun is suffering from multiple arthritis, the manager said.

Big Vernon Ayres, who was out for more than a week with an injured shoulder, is back in action, but his shoulder is strapped up and Bill Cook's eye, damaged by a flying puck, is still bothersome.

The Rangers dropped a 4-2 decision to the leading Detroit Red Wings in the Western city last night. Marty Barry scored half way through the second frame with Ott Heller in the penalty box for holding, and the Detroiters were never headed after that.

AHEARN

O'HARA Most Successful Of Track Owners

By Bob Ahearn

That's the feat of Walter E. O'Hara, enterprising head of Narragansett Park. Within the space of two years, O'Hara's 'Gansett oval became the talk of the turf world.

While Maryland tracks were offering $600 and $700 for overnight races, New York offering $800 and western tracks very seldom offering more than $800, O'Hara introduced the $1000 purse for overnight races.

Narragansett was an instant success, setting new records in attendance and mutuel handles. It wasn't long before O'Hara was turning down offers of 300 per cent on his investment.

Rhode Island, the smallest state in the union, gets more revenue from horse racing than any other state where the sport of kings is legalized. In 1935, Rhode Island received $1,047,587.63 for 72 racing days at 'Gansett.

Rhode Island's racing law, under which Narragansett operates, gives as much revenue to the treasury as any other state. The law allows a 10 per cent take with ½ per cent going to the track, the breakage to the nickel also going to the track owners.

O'Hara began his business as a newspaperman, but soon headed for New Bedford and Fall River when he found himself engaged in the cotton business. Everything he did was a success, and soon he was sitting on top.

But his restless self was not settled. He visioned a race track in Pawtucket, R. I., when the interest of horse racing made such a stamp on New England's populace with the opening of Rockingham Park.

With the passage of the bill legalizing the pee-gees in Rhode Island, O'Hara went about to build a race track at Pawtucket, and in the space of some 45 days, beautiful Narragansett Park, was fashioned.

At the end of two seasons of the sport, the track has paid for itself, stockholders have received $437,300 in dividends, and the sum of $305,973.22 has been set up as a reserve for expansion and depreciation.

(Eighth of a series on "The Turf and Its People" will appear on these pages shortly. It will be a story of "Diamond Jim" Brady and his activities in the racing game.)

Stiff Schedule For Cornell

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—The most difficult schedule a Cornell football team has faced in at least a decade confronts the big Red's 1936 array.

For the first time since 1932, the team will be asked to play as many as eight games, at least six of them against major opponents. Yale appears on the card for the first time since 1889, and Penn State for the first time since 1918. The Yale game, scheduled for New Haven on Oct. 3, will mark the second time the two schools have met, Yale won, 56-6, in their only previous clash.

Only seven games definitely were announced today by a contest for Nov. 7 is pending. The schedule provides one open date, on Oct. 10, between the Yale and Syracuse games.

The schedule: Sept. 26, Alfred; Oct. 3, Yale at New Haven; 17, Syracuse; 24, Penn State; 31, Columbia at New York; Nov. 7, pending; 14, Dartmouth; 26, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

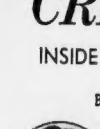
INSIDE STORY OF RACKETEERS

By MARTIN MOONEY



MARTIN MOONEY

Racketeers Exact Huge Cash Toll

(Copyright, 1935, by Martin Mooney. Distributed by King Features Synd., Inc.)

CHAPTER ELEVEN

If everyone knew the setup of some of the horse racing as it is manipulated in the United States every day the phrase "Sport of Kings" might be lengthened by one word to "Sport of Racketeer Kings."

If you call making a million a day a sport—and it is pretty sporting at that—then the title as revised is perfect.

Crime, Incorporated, operates in 10 per cent of the races, not touching 90 per cent. And in the 90 per cent of the races untouched by the racketeers there are more than 50 ways in which the best horse can run out of the money.

The racketeers of racing know this full well, so they choose 10 per cent of the races to operate in for their "sure thing." That 10 per cent yields them plenty.

Artichoke Racket

The crime corporation has artichokes to thank for the foundation of one of their most lucrative rackets. And the Pilgrim fathers of the artichoke racket certainly had no idea how the racket would develop to embrace eventually every form of farm product.

It was right after the World War that two Sicilians of Brooklyn were on the lookout for an income for which they would have to do no work.

One of them bethought himself of that edible thistle that is called an artichoke and considered a delicacy by many and a luxury by most of food by others. Since the artichokes that reached town were limited in number and were received from only two sources — California and Florida—the racket was soon developed into a foolproof organization.

But there wasn't really big money in extorting just artichokes. There was very simple for the artichoke king to figure out that what he could do with controlling artichokes he could do with celery, spinach, strawberries, peaches and all those products that must be delivered fresh and crisp in order to be sold at an advantageous price.

The Sicilians had their work laid out for them while this newly expanded produce racket was being organized. They would hijack trucks, intimidate wholesalers and go through all the tactics of gangland's strong-arm maneuvers.

Strawberry trains during the height of the season are given precedence over the fastest passenger and mail expresses. Only the silk trains have precedence over the strawberry shipments.

But if there are men waiting to stop the trucks that meet these fast strawberry trains, of what avail is all the speed? Twenty-four hours was usually enough to spoil tens of thousands of dollars' worth of strawberries or peaches or apricots or whatever the fruit might be.

"Hot Ice" Millions

There's many a Gertie, Sally, Roberta, Florence, Mary or Sue who on that all-important finger of the left hand is wearing a memento of the crime corporation's activities. Unwittingly she is wearing hot ice in her engagement ring.

Unwittingly too the best fellow in the world who placed that ring there furnished the last and concluding link in the diamond racket that brings crime combines a very fat income.

But the crime corporation will have no part of kidnaping in any form whatsoever, taking elaborate precautions to keep even the faintest tinge or taint of kidnaping from its otherwise well-soiled garments. Public indignation is too great and powerful a kidnaping crime long warrant the taking of the slightest chance by the crime combines.

The one thing legitimate about Crime, Incorporated, is its money. And with regard to that highly useful commodity Crime, Incorporated, probably ranks second only to the United States Treasury in the amount it has liquid and ready for immediate action.

Cash in hand, the super-racketeers have always found, is worth two billions of securities in the hush. Bundles of $1000 bills are handled by the crime combines as though they were so many bolts of calico or cartons of butter.

By cash the super-racketeers in tactics where they would do the most good, Crime, Incorporated, went into a legitimate business and for a short time were shoo merchants extraordinary.

The receivers appointed saw no hope for reorganization and also saw ahead a dead loss of several millions if they did not get rid of the great store of shoes. They therefore advertised that bids would be received on a certain date for the entire stock. Because of the great amount of cash that would be involved, the receivers knew that there were less than half a dozen firms in the country that could be expected to bid.

Strangely enough, the business men of Crime, Incorporated, knew the same thing. It happened to be a moment when the surplus funds were resting in strong boxes, idle and earning no dividends. So the crime clique went to work.

Contacts were made with each of the possible bidders and these firms were told that it would be much healthier and wiser if no bids were made for the shoes.

Meanwhile offers were opened in three different eastern cities by three members of the crime combine, each one seemingly a legitimate jobbing concern specializing in the purchase of wholesale lots of shoes.

When the day for the opening of bids arrived the receivers found only three bids for the great shoe stocks, each bid accompanied by a certified check for 25 per cent of the bid, as per the stipulations made by the receivers.

Since the terms of the sale were that the highest bidder would win, the three dummy companies organized by the crime combine had made their bids just half of what the legitimate jobbing concerns might have offered. The three fake companies made their bids all within a thousand or two of each other and naturally the highest offer of the three won each time.

Did Crime, Incorporated, go into the shoe business and proceed to retail shoes on the open market? Not on your life. Crime, Incorporated, has been a quicker and easier method of turning a handsome profit.

Since the legitimate firms, which had been intimidated into not putting in a bid, would have offered twice what the crime combine dummy offered it was far easier to do business with these firms. The crime combine's bidders, keeping this office in operation, approached three of the legitimate jobbing houses.

To each of these they said: We can go for just twice what he paid for it, still making it profitable for the legitimate business firm to make a handsome profit in disposing of the huge stock. It would have been simply bad business for the legitimate concerns to turn down the offer. So they paid, knowing full well that someone had made many thousands.

What toll racketeers take from legitimate industry and businessa enterprises in the United States every year has never even been estimated. It is impossible to know, for the racketeers don't talk and industrialists and businessmen dare not, because the money paid by big business to Crime, Incorporated, is gotten purely and simply by intimidation.

1800 Cast Away On Ice Floe, Safe

Guriev, Kazan Republic, U. S. S. R., Jan. 24 (AP)—Eight days of anxiety for the fate of 1800 fishermen carried away by an ice-field from the shore of the Caspian were relieved today when the castaways managed to establish wireless contact with the shore.

They reported they had ample food supplies, but the ice-field was in danger of breaking up and requested immediate help.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3 Bids and Proposals

CITY OF SOMERVILLE
P. W. Engineering Department
Contract No. 7630-C
NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

The Mayor of the City of Somerville invites proposals for the construction, reconstruction of sewers in Somerville. Proposals are to furnish all materials and labor to lay 18 inch to 20 inch clay sewer to lay a system sewer in Broadway, Cross Street and Pearl Street. Proposals prepared in accordance with instructions contained in contract documents will be received at the office of the City Engineer, City Hall, Somerville, Massachusetts, until 12 Noon, Eastern Standard Time, on Thursday, February 6, 1936, and at that time and place publicly opened and read.

Plans, specifications, and other contract documents may be inspected at the office of the City Engineer at the above address, upon the deposit payment of $5.00. Said deposit will be refunded if all documents are returned in good condition on or before the opening date of bids.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a properly certified check on a responsible bank or trust company for the sum of two thousand dollars ($2000.00), made payable to the City of Somerville, Massachusetts.

All checks, except that of the bidder to whom the contract is awarded, will be returned after execution of the contract on demand.

The project is to be financed and constructed under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act of June 16, 1933, as amended, and attention is called to the provisions and obligations prescribed by the Act.

The office of the United States Employment Service designated by the Government for this project is as follows: State Public Employment Service, 89 Broad St., Manager). 90 Bow Street, Somerville, Mass.

The successful bidder will be required to comply with the provisions of Chapter 30 of the General Laws of Massachusetts, acting through its Director, P. W. A.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of thirty (30) days after the date set for the opening thereof.

A surety bond by a company satisfactory to the Mayor and City Council in the full amount equal to one hundred (100) per cent of the contract price will be required from the successful bidder.

LEON G. GAYER,
City Engineer,
LESLIE S. SMITH,
Mayor of the City of Somerville,
Somerville, Massachusetts, Jan. 23, 1936.

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

RED RUSSIA THROWS OFF HER DISGUISE

AMONG the most rabid enemies of the national defense in America are the Communists and Communist sympathizers.

Among the most vociferous "pledges" of their avowed and camouflaged organizations is the "pledge" to support the "peace policies" of Soviet Russia.

On January 9 Communist Russia THREW OFF her thin disguise of professional pacifist, and appeared before the world as what he has always been—THE MOST FORMIDABLE MILITARISTIC EMPIRE OF MODERN TIMES.

BEFORE the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, in the Kremlin Palace on the above date, Premier Molotoff said:

"WE MUST INCREASE AND IMPROVE OUR TANKS, BOMBING PLANES, ARTILLERY AND CHEMICAL DEFENSE . . . WE MUST SEE THAT THE ENTIRE ARMY IS PREPARED TO ACT WITH THE HIGHEST EFFICIENCY."

Communist Russia NOW has ONE MILLION MEN UNDER ARMS.

MILITARY SERVICE IN COMMUNIST RUSSIA IS COMPULSORY (attention all Red students' leagues, Red pacifists and camouflaged Communistic organizations "Against War and Fascism").

WORKERS, 46 per cent; PEASANTS, 43 per cent; OFFICE EMPLOYES, 11 per cent.

This is the "pacifism" of "The Workers' Paradise"!

MEANWHILE, sabotage of the national defense forces in other countries of the world is an ACKNOWLEDGED PART of the Moscow strategy to destroy their governments and to establish a "dictatorship of the proletariat" backed by "proletarian" military forces.

And events have proved that this is true.

Our own government was lately compelled to warn Russia that diplomatic relations would cease if the state-sponsored Comintern in Moscow did not give up plotting the overthrow of our institutions.

Treasury Resignations Are Disquieting

NOT the Pat Harrisons and the Joe Robinsons in the Senate, nor representatives like the speaker, Mr. Byrns, or Mr. Doughton, who ever part with the Administration on a question of principle.

And there are many like them—who exist only for re-election, and the patronage on which they rely to make it certain.

We shall NEVER read of their retirement from office because they cannot support measures which are unsound and policies which spell disaster to the country and the people.

There are, however, some men who have been connected with the Administration, who still put PRINCIPLE ABOVE OFFICE and prefer to resign rather than to compromise their conscience and integrity.

TWO of these have left the public service—T. Jefferson Coolidge of Boston, under-Secretary of the Treasury, and L. W. Robert, Jr., of Atlanta, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Despite the civil terms in which their resignation were conveyed and the studied cordiality of the President's letters, addressed respectively "My Dear Jeff" and "My Dear Chip," in the President's best schoolboy manner, it is manifest that these officials, who have made good records, have got their fill of New Deal nonsense and folly, and can stand it no longer.

They will NOT be "yes" men!

As Treasury officials, they refuse to be parties to the looting of the Treasury and the dissipation of the nation's resources on projects that are utterly without pretense of being legitimate measures of a sober and responsible government.

MR. COOLIDGE and Mr. Robert now take their place with Lewis W. Douglas, former director of the budget; Dean Acheson, the former under-Secretary of the Treasury; O. M. W. Sprague, former fiscal adviser to the Treasury; James P. Warburg, also financial adviser to the government; George N. Peek, agricultural specialist, not to mention many others who have resigned to save their self-respect and their reputations.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., is left—the President will still have someone to say "yes."

It is increasingly manifest that the slap-dash, hit or miss, carefree and irresponsible way in which the grave concerns of the government are being administered must sooner or later—end!

HOW it will end—in what form of disaster—time will tell.

Practical Work for WPA

Employment of WPA men for snow removal is practical. It should be encouraged.

Wrangling between municipal officials and relief authorities over the transfer of workers from works projects to blocked streets is contrary to public interest. It should cease.

Snow storms and blocked streets are costly. Cities and towns with constantly decreasing revenues have found them especially so in recent years.

Here is where the WPA worker proves useful. His wages are paid largely out of Federal appropriations. Each shovelful of snow he removes from a highway is one the city or town will not have to pay for.

By Nelson Harding

We must admit this gang is here,
They swarm on every hand,
A sinister and evil crowd
That roams throughout our land.

The crook, the Communist, the crank
And alien, all too free
The land of Liberty.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

And a grand description of Joe Louis by Bill Corum: "Fighting is the only gag he knows." Burns Mantle has the innocent expression of a schoolboy. After 20 years first nighting, too.

A turner of heads on the avenue: Larry Tibbett. Story going around: Will Rogers refused $50,000 to endorse a certain chewing gum. It was the one brand he didn't like. Lenox Lohr, new N. B. C. head, is a ringer for Leon Errol. What became of the Normandie? Study in stateliness: Constance Collier.

Radio voices that seem tired: Bing Crosby's and Morton Downey's. For the Look the Same 15 Years Ago Club: George Jean Nathan. Among minor arts: The breast pocket handkerchief display by Billy Gaxton. Walter Lippmann writes a column when he feels like it. And generally rings the bell.

Add apple cheekers: Arthur Hopkins, Zoe Beckley and Percy Hammond. Not many women speak their mind so capably as Dorothy Thompson. Glory hole for autographists: Lindy's. One thing in New York that hasn't changed in my time: Hotel Lafayette. Naivete: Martha Dean often blushes, broadcasting.

High hat of the dead pans: Cardinal. Pleasantly named peak—Brandywine Summit, Pa. Memory: Grandma's yearly visitor from New York, the frock-coated traveling optician. And peeking at him with the hired girl from the kitchen. Be fun to see Robert E. Sherwood in Scotch kilts.

One of the now lonely survivors points to the Grim Reaper's devastating sweep of the old Evening World staff, the liveliest in town, during the years 1917-18. The departed are: E. C. Chapin, J. H. Tennant, Gene Bertrand, Nixola Greeley-Smith, Lindsey Denniston, Bozeman Bulger, Jack Goldfrap, Wurra Wurra McLaughlin, Ernest Bedington, Harry Hazlewood, Frank Marney, Will Van Benthuysen, Charlie Somerville, Arthur W. Clark, Johnny Pollock, Remsen Crawford and Joe Jordan.

Another survivor of that illustrious staff is Albert Payson Terhune, the strapping six footer, who in his day probably turned out more newspaper and magazine stuff in a given time than any one before or since. Some weeks 60,000 words. He worked so furiously, one arm became useless. His now famous dog stories resulted from an evening of chicha around the open fire at his Pompton Lakes, N. J., home. Ray Long, then editor of the Red Book, was there and Terhune began to spin romanzas of collies he was raising. When he finished, Long said: "Why don't you write some of those, Bert?" And he did.

There was a legend that a newspaperman, if he applied to the city editor, Charles Chapin, when he arrived at the Evening World at 6 a. m., was fairly sure of landing a job. During a week, less stretch I was there at 5:30 awaiting him in the outer hall. He was widely three-sheeted as an ogre who fairly gulped cubs raw but my bride had spent most of the night in prayer and I was desperate. So I tackled him. "You've heard that early bird catches the worm gag about me, too?" he inquired.

I owned I had. He didn't give me a job. It was July and they were laying men off, he said. But he showed no gruffness. Perhaps because my voice trembled into flutely uptakes. He was quite sympathetic.

In a scrap book I have a letter he wrote from his Sing Sing cell. I had gotten on a bit and, remembering my appeal he clipped one of my columns across which he wrote: "Perhaps it was better I could not give you that job after all."

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

THE CYNIC'S UNABRIDGED

Alimony:—An annuity from a Love Insurance policy. The weekly installments when two people make a mistake, and one of them has to continue paying for it.

Bachelor:—Somebody's potential husband. The raw material, on which no woman has yet put the finishing touches.

Ex-wife:—The angel you took to Niagara Falls—and the devil you put on the train for Reno. One who has been tried and found wanting—a good lawyer.

Old Flame:—A man who tells you how much he once loved you, years after you are both safely married—to somebody else.

Bureau of Standards

Human Side of the News

In the Sibyl's cave of the winds, which is Washington, there is one temple of precision, of scientific certainty, of faithful adherence to fact and of steadily useful performance. It is the National Bureau of Standards.

As the silk hosiery manufacturers meet in New York to adopt a standard for the grading of silk stockings, they have before them data recording all that science can offer regarding the "behavior of a woman's full-fashioned stocking," as the bureau studied such behavior, at the request of the American Federation of Women's Clubs.

To make this study, they made machines which subject a silk stocking to all the varying stress and strain of actual wearing. Materials, weaving, fashioning, service under varing degrees of humidity, stretching range, resistance to shoe abrasion were studied and determined.

IMPORTANT TO WOMEN

Getting a well-fashioned and durable silk stocking at a reasonable price is a matter of real interest to millions of American women—certainly of much more pressing and immediate concern than many of the heavily headlined doings of the congressmen.

The bureau never rests in its relentless pursuit of waste, sleazy workmanship, shoddy or inefficient manufacture in the vast stream of goods which flows unceasingly from the machines to the consumers.

But, being solely a scientific body, it can take no stand, enter into no contention as to whether the people are getting their money's worth.

Less easily observable but profoundly important in the building of America's entire industrial establishment has been the bureau's unending research in technological processes and devices, ranging from processes which helped to bring on the great iron behemoths of heavy duty machinery, down to sub-microscopic chemical and physical subtleties through the infinitely minute exactitudes of instruments of precision.

Its achievements in the field of research science have been many and invaluable. It does no research in fabricated articles, but its work has helped make possible many devices which have added leisure and efficiency to American homes.

When Lee de Forrest and Theodore Case were on the trail of the photo-electric cell, that mystifying rig which, unseen, opens and closes the gates at New York's Pennsylvania station, they came on the tracks of the bureau men. Ahead of everybody else, they had pressed on to this frontier.

DEEP IN PURE SCIENCE

And deep in the field of pure science have been the bureau's researches in another field of wizardry, that of catalysis. This chemical skeleton key already has freed a horde of kindly demons which are making the world a better place to live in. Here, too, the quiet, self-effacing, usually somewhat stooped and bespectacled scientists—about 400 of them—are achieving more definite results in plain everyday human welfare than the gaudiest klieg-light politicians.

Many of them are meagerly paid. Many bear names widely known in science. In obscurity they carry on faithfully, finding the profound satisfaction of fine achievement.

FREE FROM POLITICS

President McKinley established the Bureau of Standards. It was wisely insulated against political interference. The scientists' jobs are safe, and their facilities for disinterested research are abundant.

Along with J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation, it is a splendid illustration of the effectiveness of national effort when it is clear of all patronage and partisan entanglements. Lyman I. Briggs, chief of the research division, carries on his work quietly and effectively, free from interference, and he doesn't have to worry over this being a campaign year.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

He's 18. Remember yourself at 18, Bill—with your young blood leaping and your young spirit listening for the call of some great cause?

Yes, I know—the "crusade" turned out to be just a job in the shipping department. But you still haven't forgotten that first fine fury. And you have you? And perhaps it will help you sympathize with this other youngster.

He too is all set for great doings. But first he'd like "a sort of creed. You know, Elsie, a general rule a fellow could go by?"

Yes, lad, I know. And I've never heard a better creed than the one President Roosevelt quoted in his recent address. It was given to him in his youth "by a wise philosopher" whose name he did not repeat.

FINE MARCHING ORDERS

"Fear not!

"Give daily all that you have to give.

Strong medicine, boy! Medicine that will hearten you for any adventure—heal you of any vicious wound or defilement.

"FEAR NOT!"

Your own fear is your worst —actually your only—enemy. An infinite number of unfortunate things can happen to you, many of them beyond your control. But, unless your own fear permits those things to get under your skin, you can rise above any misfortune.

"HAVE FAITH IN THE TRIUMPH OF THE IDEAL."

This is a sad world, lad. A bitterly bewildered world. And looking it over from the biased viewpoint of your young impatience and inexperience, you'll soon conclude that decency doesn't pay, that honesty is a joke and justice a washout.

But that's not so, son. GOODNESS REALLY WORKS. AND TRUTH WINS OUT, IN THE LONG RUN, OVER ANY LIE.

"GIVE DAILY ALL THAT YOU HAVE TO GIVE."

CAN'T BUY REAL THINGS

For you get out of life only that which you give. You can buy land, jewels, automobiles, travel tickets, endless amusements. But you can't buy the things that make life worth living—enthusiasm, curiosity, tenderness, the quickening sense of adventure.

These things you GET only as you GIVE them yourself. Give all that you have . . . IF YOU WISH ANYTHING IN RETURN.

And when you tire of the long, hard trail, remember this—You are bearing this load, you are making this sacrifice, not for yourself alone, but for those who went before and those who will follow after. Be true to them, lad! Fight the good fight! KEEP THE FAITH!
